BRITISH-ITALO TENSION AGAIN LOOMS

Fresh Period Of Storm And Stress To Irk Government

Now Clear That Italian Request For Early Ratification of Peace Treaty Revives Hostile Suspicions

LONDON, July 9.—The Times (Independent) today hinted the summer might see growing tension between Great Britain and an Italy impatient over the delay in putting into force the Rome-London reconciliation agreement.

"There are indeed plenty of indications that a fresh period of storm and stress lies ahead in international relations," the Times said.

"It is clear the British government's inability to accept the Italian request for early ratification of the Anglo-Italian agreement has revived suspicions in Rome that the forces in England which are hostile to the agreement are proving too strong for Prime Minister Chamberlain and that the agreement itself was conceived as a means of keeping Italy quiet until England was strong enough to dominate her.

BITTERNESS SHOWN

"This belief was no doubt responsible for the exceptional bitterness of Premier Mussolini's attack on the 'democratic plutocracies' from a threshing machine last Monday. During this week the Fascist press has indulged in a number of gratuitous attacks on these lines which almost recall those of the sanctions period.

"It does not seem to occur to Mussolini's storm troops of the press that reviling the democracies as such, when a formula is employed which so neatly covers both the right and left, is liable to annoy

HAIL DAMAGE IS HIGH FOR GREENHOUSES

$1,000 Loss Suffered As Glass Smashed—Crops Hit At Ardrossan

Hail storm which ripped through Edmonton Friday afternoon caused approximately $1,000 damage to greenhouses and flattened many city gardens. Crop loss of 15 per cent was reported at Ardrossan.

Cutting a narrow swath through Edmonton and district, hail did heaviest damage to greenhouses owned by Kerrison and Adams, florists at 10509 70 avenue. About 1,000 panes of glass were smashed by hail-stones, loss being estimated at $500.

500 PANES BROKEN

Morgan's Flower Shop greenhouses at 10756 Whyte avenue, reported 500 panes broken in the storm, damage being estimated at $500.

Walter Ramsay's greenhouses at 11018 100 avenue, reported 400 panes smashed.

Crop damage to the extent of 15 per cent occurred at Ardrossan, but little or no damage was suffered at other district points.

The storm swept South Edmonton, the West End and downtown sections of the city. No rain fell west of 149 street. A heavy fall of hail damaged gardens in the Highlands.

CABLE DAMAGE

Only slight trouble was reported by the electric light and telephone departments as a result of the storm, which caused some small cable damage.

Trees were blown down in some sections of the city, particularly in the West End, where they were uprooted by the force of the blast.

Following a high temperature of 83 recorded for 2:45 p.m. Friday, hail and rain started to fall at 3:45 p.m. A 15-mile-an-hour wind accompanied the storm, which brought .29 inches of moisture.

WEATHER REPORTS

Weather reports from provincial points follow:

Vegreville—clear, 30 minutes heavy rain; Lloydminster — light rain, no hail; Willingdon—1½ hours rain with hail; uncertain damage; Beauvallon—one hour rain with some hail; some damage; Lacombe—30 minutes rain, no hail; Wetaskiwin—no rain or hail; Strome—30 minutes light rain, no hail; Camrose—no rain or hail; Hardisty—heavy rain, no hail; Killam—two hours rain, no hail; Kerrobert—light rain, no hail; Veteran—no rain, no hail.

Early Morning Fire Destroys Home In North

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

GRANDE PRAIRIE, Alta., July 9—Fire presumably caused by a faulty stove completely destroyed the two storey frame home of E. M. Lanctot early this morning. The fire was noticed about 3:30 and Mr. Lanctot and his son who were alone in the house, had only time to escape in their night clothes. The house is isolated and by the time the fire department arrived it was doomed. A strong wind was blowing.

Mrs. Lanctot is expected home today from a visit with relatives in Montreal.

Today's Bulletin

$1,000 CACHE FUR IS FOUND HERE SATURDAY

Royal Canadian Mounted Police reported at noon Saturday that they had recovered a $1,000 bale of furs stolen from the room of a downtown Edmonton hotel Friday night.

They said they had discovered the bale intact, cached in the bush in North Edmonton.

Walter Langstaff, northland trapper, who came to the city with the cream of his winter's catch of furs earlier in the week, reported early Saturday that the bundle of furs had disappeared sometime during the night while he was on a party with three other men he met since coming to the city.

The bundle contained 34 red fox, 17 cross fox, one silver fox, three marten, nine mink and 19 weasel skins.

China To Get 200 Airplanes From Russia

HONG KONG, July 9—A fleet of 200 Soviet Russian airplanes for China was reported Friday by a reliable source to be in process of delivery for service in the Chinese-Japanese war. This source asserted some of the aircraft already had been flown to Hankow, provisional Chinese capital.

The consignment was reported to include both light and heavy bombers, monoplane fighters with a speed of at least 270 miles an hour—believed slightly under the speed of the best Japanese pursuit ships—and biplane fighters with a speed of about 240 miles.

Padlock Law Is Again Enforced

MONTREAL, July 9.—For the fifteenth time, a bookshop operated by the Friends of the Soviet Union was raided Friday by provincial officers operating under Quebec's "padlock" law. Nearly 5,000 pieces of literature were seized.

Train Severs Foot Of Drumheller Boy

DRUMHELLER, July 9—Falling under a train, Archie Young, 14, of Rosedale, near here, had his foot severed and suffered scalp wounds late Friday. He was found beside the tracks by a passerby shortly after the train came into Rosedale.

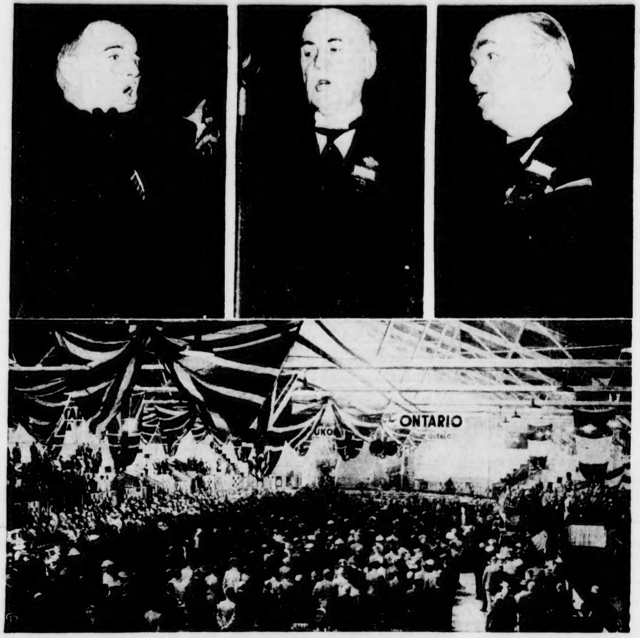
OTTAWA, July 9.—The public works department Friday announced the following contract had been let: Sylvan Lake, Alta., breakwater wharf—Wm. C. Wells of Wilkie, Sask., at about $18,368.

Meighen's Speech Highlights First Tory Conclave



Highlight of the opening session of the National Conservative convention at Ottawa, was the speech by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen urging that Canada closely co-operate with Great Britain in the matter of empire defence. Following Mr. Meighen's speech the delegation from Quebec threatened to leave the convention if an attempt was made to introduce an imperialistic program for the party. Mr. Meighen is shown top left, as he delivered his appeal for co-operation with England. Sir Thomas White, former minister of finance, is pictured, centre, delivering the convention's keynote speech. Thunderous applause broke out from the packed coliseum, as Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, top right, made his first appearance at the gathering which named his successor. A view of the convention floor as the session opened is shown, below.

GOLD TOWN IS BEING CARVED OUT OF NORTH

Despite Feverish Activity At Yellowknife Some Are Jobless

Although Yellowknife, the centre of Canada's newest and most exciting gold discoveries, is the scene of feverish activity as carpenters, miners and laborers race against time in an effort to "build up" the town, the district already has its unemployment problems, it was learned here Saturday.

More than 25 men, who found their way into the camp early in the spring, in spite of warnings that there would be no work for transient labor and that the mining companies were hiring their men "outside" and bringing them "in". These men are without means of livelihood and are dependent entirely upon the few fish they catch in the streams and public generosity for their support, it was reported.

Population of the Yellowknife community was estimated at about 700 by John A. Michaels, prominent Edmonton businessman, who has returned from a tour of the district. He was exceedingly optimistic about the future of the town and described the building that was taking place in an effort to provide accommodation for the businesses and businessmen who have located in the community.

Most of this work has been done under the direction of H. P. Alexander, Edmonton contractor, Mr. Michaels said.

The Hudson's Bay Company also is building a large two-storey general store, while the Imperial Oil Company is installing several storage plants, Mr. Michaels reported.

BERLIN, July 9.—Max Schmeling's return home in defeat caused hardly a ripple of excitement today as the Bremerhaven boat train reached Berlin for a cheerless reception.

8 Million Frenchmen Armed

Catacomb Forts And Maginot Line Spread Frontier

Nation Ravaged Twice by Invasion in Last 68 Years Now Armed to Hilt—Swift Changes Made

By GORDON KING

British United Press—Exclusive Cable to The Bulletin.

PARIS, July 9.—Eight million Frenchmen are ready to seize rifles and borrow into "catacomb forts" to defend the soil of France. For the key to French defence is now the amazing "Maginot Line" of steel and concrete, which, with its extensions, spreads along the frontiers.

This nation, ravaged twice by invasion in the last 68 years, has armed to the hilt. She does not intend to become the battleground of the next world war if steel and military ingenuity can prevent it.

More than half of every franc collected in taxes is turned over to the army, navy and air force. Despite the swift changes in military strength because of the rearmament race, France's army is still judged by experts to be one of the best in Europe, particularly as regards trained personnel.

FEAR HAUNTS HEART

The fear that haunts every Frenchman is another invasion from the east. Out of that fear has developed the $400,000,000 system of underground forts that guards every inch of the northern and eastern frontiers except for a narrow strip opening on the Swiss valleys.

Against land attack, France considers herself impregnable. She counts on her own and the British navy to guard her coastline.

VULNERABLE TO AIR

But, like all nations on the crowded continent of Europe, France is vulnerabe to air attacks.

That is why the general staff has taken extraordinary precau-

New Provincial Power Plant Is Ready To Operate

Involving an outlay of $18,000 with an annual saving in power and light bills of $6,000, the new power unit installed in the provincial government power plant is nearly ready for active operation, Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works announced on Saturday. Work of installation was commenced in April.

In installing the new unit the power supplied to the main legislative building will be changed over from direct current to alternating, for which practically all electrical appliances and equipment are now made.

Jasper Road In Excellent Shape Maclean Reports

The highway between Edmonton and Jasper is in excellent condition, it was reported by Neil D. Maclean, K.C., who returned to the city Friday night by motor from Jasper National Park.

Mr. Maclean declared reports circulated that the road near Carrot Creek was in bed shape were not true. Cars travelling to and from Jasper have had no trouble whatsoever, he said.

TORY LEADER'S FIRST PROBLEM TO FIND SEAT

Manion Has Three Choices Available—British Press Pays Tribute

OTTAWA, July 9—One of the first decisions facing Hon. R. J. Manion, elected as leader of the National Conservative party, will be the measures he will adopt to find a seat in the House of Commons. He has at least three courses open to him but no decision has been announced.

There is no particular hurry for Dr. Manion obtaining a seat in parliament since there will be no session until late fall or possibly not until next year. Reports have persisted that the next session will open in October or November but there has been nothing official.

Federal vacancies exist in Waterloo South and London, created respectively by the deaths of A. M. Edwards and F. C. Betts, both Conservatives. Already Dr. Manion has been pressed by

MacKinnon Is Back In City From Ottawa

James A. MacKinnon, Liberal M.P. for West Edmonton and Alberta's spokesman in the federal government, returned Saturday from the session at Ottawa.

Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada and federal leader of the Liberal party, will visit Alberta in September, Mr. MacKinnon announced.

The Prime Minister's trip will be in the nature of a personal visit rather than of a formal speaking tour, Mr. MacKinnon said.

Third Cricket Tilt Postponed

MANCHESTER, Eng., July 9.—After waiting until late in the afternoon in the hope the rain-soaked Old Trafford ground would recover, another postponement was made in the third England-Australia cricket test match today.

British To Build 5,000 Planes For R.A.F. In Canada

New York Paper Sees Likelihood of Huge Supply and Training Base in Dominion For Britain's Air Force

NEW YORK, July 9.—The New York Herald Tribune in a front page article today stated: "Possibility of the establishment in Canada of a huge supply and training base for Great Britain's Royal Air Force, to remove a great section of British military aviation from the geographical vulnerability of England, was indicated yesterday (Friday) with the disclosure that the British Air Mission on its recent visit to the United States, sought to induce American aircraft manufacturers to establish a Canadian plant on a guarantee to buy 1,000 planes.

The plan is said to have been advanced so far in discussion in diplomatic and military circles that an expenditure of $1,000,000 by the British government is regarded as probable for the undertaking, which would embrace not only a manufacturing plant and airdrome, but also a training field to be in constant use for the development of pilots to man 5,000 R.A.F. planes which would be based permanently in Canada. . . .

MADE CONTRACTS

The British air mission, headed by James G. Weir, air commodore of the British reserve forces, came here in April and made contracts for the purchase of 400 planes for use in the R.A.F. The cost of these aircraft was placed at $25,000,000, with 200 planes to be supplied by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, of Burbank, Cal., and the other 200 by North American Aviation, of Inglewood, Cal.

While making these purchases, to overcome the lag in British

CITY MEN GET T.C.A. POSTS AS ENGINEERS

Donald Gray, Arthur Trotter Leave Edmonton For Winnipeg

Two young Edmonton air engineers, Donald H. "Red" Gray, 25, of El Tovar Apartments, and Arthur Trotter, 35, of 9318 109 avenue, will leave Edmonton for Winnipeg on July 15 to join the staff of the repair and maintenance department of Trans-Canada Airlines, it was learned Saturday.

The two young men, both of whom are Albertans — Gray was born in Macleod and Trotter in Fort Saskatchewan—are at present employed by Aircraft Repairs. This is a subsidiary of Mackenzie Air Service and United Air Transport, and largest airplane repair shop in western Canada. They both obtained the greater part of their training in Edmonton. Both are married.

STRIKES SPREAD IN HOLY LAND, MORE DEATHS

LONDON, July 9—The government has authorized immediate dispatch to Palestine of the 11th Regiment of Hussars, a tank unit stationed in Egypt, the Colonial office announced today.

JERUSALEM, July 9. — Arab strikes spread to several parts of Palestine Friday, complicating the problem of authorities endeavoring to restore order in the troubled holy land.

A regiment of Irish guards arrived today to help in the restoration of order.

The slaying of two Christians and one Moslem in an Arab village in the Nazareth district brought the number of deaths in three days to 61. At least 153 were wounded.

Most Arab shops in Jerusalem remained closed. Few persons dared venture into the streets.

Mystery Veils Death Wealthy Ontario Woman

RACINE, Wis., July 9—Mrs. William Horlick, Sr., 88, died at her home today.

Mrs. Horlick was the widow of the founder of the Horlick Malted Milk company and mother of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, who died Wednesday at Toronto, under circumstances now being investigated.

Because of Mrs. Horlick's death, funeral plans for Mrs. Sidley here today were cancelled. A double funeral, private, will be held here Monday. Mrs. Horlick has been an invalid for several years.

Unlikelihood of Near Evacuation in Spain Is Cause of Uneasiness

PERATION OF ANGLO-ITALIAN PACT SOUGHT

easonable Number Of Italian Troops Must Be Moved

LONDON, July 8.—The appar-nt unlikelihood of a start in vacuation of foreign troops from pain and putting into effect the nglo-Italian friendship treaty efore parliament adjourns July 9 is causing some concern among overnment leaders, well-informed sources said last night.

In Rome Friday, the Earl of Perth, ritish ambassador, and the Italian reign minister, Count Galeazzo iano, held their second conference ithin a week. Competent quarrs believed they discussed the uestion of getting the treaty into fect shortly.

ITHOUT WAITING

Italy recently has made known a esire to get the pact into operion without waiting for a settlement of the Spanish question, but rime Minister Chamberlain has ade it clear the treaty, signed pril 16, is not to become valid ntil a reasonable number of Italn troops have been moved off the berian peninsula.

Even if the complex mechanism f the non-intervention committee orks with smoothness and desatch, substantial evacuation of mported fighters from Spain cannot begin before mid-September was said.

TEP FORWARD

The non-intervention machinery oved a step forward Friday when . B. Kagan, Soviet delegate to he committee, announced his government's adherence to the latest nd final revisions of the plan. Kagan gave his approval earlier his week contingent on Moscow's ndorsement.

Italy Makes Art Present To Germany

ROME, July 8 — The Italian government decided Friday to give — instead of sell — Germany one of Rome's famous art treasures, the Lancellotti copy of the Discobolus, or discus thrower, because of Chancellor Hitler's interest in it. A communique said gift of the copy of the ancient Greek sculptor Myron's statue valued at about $250,000 was "testimony of the friendship" binding Italy and Germany.

Mullen Opens Red Deer Fair

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

RED DEER, July 8.—Central Alberta people turned out in their hundreds on Friday for the second day of the Red Deer fair. Hon. D. B. Mullen, provincial minister of agriculture, officially opened the fair before the afternoon's program commenced.

The minister of agriculture in opening the fair congratulated the directors for encouraging a high standard in stock raising. He also paid tribute to the pioneers who had done their share in building up a fine district.

Two horse races for local entries were run off, both of them good ones. Results: Half mile, J. Bellamy, Bowden; E. Gilbert, Clive; J. B. White, Red Deer. Five-eighths of a mile: Bellamy, Cunningham, Innisfail; Gilbert. Good crowds were present again for the evening platform performance.

domestic production and to bring the R.A.F. to parity with any continental power in striking distance of the British Isles, the mission sounded out American manufacturers on the possibility of erecting a plant in Canada, from which the British would guarantee to buy 1,000 planes.

The American manufacturers, however, were said to have been unimpressed with the 1,000-plane guaranty, countering with a proposal that they would erect a Canadian plant only on a continuing supply basis.

It was reported in Washington that the United States army air corps has heard that Great Britain was trying to induce Canada to increase her air force, while the Canadians were seeking to persuade the British government to place a large contract for the manufacture of military planes with Curtiss-Wright, Ltd., of Canada.

While the suggestion that the British eventually might make Canada the headquarters of the R.A.F. was received skeptically by army sources in Washington, they observed that the Dominion, in the summer, would be well adapted to flight training, especially long-distance flying which cannot be undertaken in other parts of the British Empire without passing over foreign territory.

Manion To Be Feted At Home

FORT WILLIAM, July 8—Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, new leader of the National Conservative party acclaimed by his supporters here as "the local boy" who brought honor and distinction to Fort William, will return to Fort William shortly to attend a gala event in his honor, Conservative association officials announced last night.

OTTAWA, July 8—Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, newly-elected Conservative leader, Friday received a cable of congratulations from members of the press gallery of the British House of Commons.

The cable read: "We in the press gallery of the House of Commons who personally remember your kindness at Ottawa in 1932 congratulate you and wish you well."

Bolt Blamed For Disaster At Michel Mine

TRAIL, B.C., July 8—Hon. W. J. Asselstine, British Columbia minister of mines, Friday described as an "Act of God" the explosion in a Michel, B.C., mine which killed three men Tuesday.

Mr. Asselstine said lightning apparently struck near the mine and was carried into the workings through a ventilating shaft, igniting explosive gases.

Provinces Get Aid From Ottawa

OTTAWA, July 8.—The federal government will set up a new division in the secretary of state's department to assist the provinces in controlling company promoting and securities salesmen, it was announced today.

An appropriation for the division, which will not be large at first, was passed by parliament. Its organization and work will be under the immediate control of W. P. J. O'Meara, assistant under-secretary of state.

any Englishman and thus increase the number of persons in Great Britain who are critical of Italy."

AIR NOT CLEARED

The resultant atmosphere, the newspaper said, can scarcely improve prospects for evacuation of foreign effectives from Spain, as provided by the London non-intervention agreement.

The Times emphasized the accord remains subordinated to settlement of the Spanish situation and that Mr. Chamberlain cannot go back on his word in this respect. It admitted, however, that Italy was not lacking in arguments to justify its point of view.

The paper implicitly accused France of giving Premier Mussolini cause for irritation in connection with Spain.

CHINESE SINK JAP WARSHIP IN AIR ATTACK

HANKOW, July 8 — Chinese air headquarters reported a Japanese warship turned over on its side and apparently went down Friday when Chinese bombers scored direct hits on enemy naval concentrations in the Yangtse river.

Chinese airmen were busy from day break to sunset as successive squadrons of heavy bombers and lighter planes attacked Japanese airfields at Anking and Wuhu and the warships.

They reported 17 enemy planes destroyed on the ground at Anking and considerable damage to the Wuhu air base. Despite squally weather all Chinese raiders returned safely, headquarters said.

Beware Cutworm! Take Precautions For 1939 Losses

By E. H. STRICKLAND
University of Alberta

It is still too early to state, with any certainty, whether there will be a recurrence of the widespread damage which was caused by red-backed cutworms this year. However, if the following facts are borne in mind, it will be realized that the outlook is rather disturbing.

Outbreaks of this cutworm can, generally speaking, be attributed to shortage of rainfall in the May and June of the PREVIOUS year. Dry conditions during this period in 1937 were ideal for an increase in the numbers of this pest which, as a result, caused widespread damage early in the present summer.

From observations made in several districts where losses were most severe, it appears that the repeated dry conditions which prevailed this year till the end of June were favorable to a still greater increase in 1939.

SEVERE OUTBREAKS

Severe outbreaks of this cutworm occur so infrequently that we do not, as yet, understand what it is which may terminate them in a single year. Possibly something will come to our rescue before next spring but, at present, there is every indication that, by the end of this month, there will be a far larger number of egg-laying moths than there were at that time last year.

This being so, there is a very real danger that cutworms will be more numerous next spring than they were this. For this reason we believe that everyone should take all possible precautions to avoid unnecessary losses.

IN CHRYSALIS

All of the cutworms are now in the chrysalis stage which is passed about three inches deep in the soil. During the last week in July they will escape as moths. Throughout August each female moth will lay about three hundred eggs. From each of these, if all goes well with them, a cutworm will hatch next spring.

We cannot as yet say how numerous the moths will be, but we do know that practically no cutworms were killed by parasites this year. Recent heavy rains may prevent many of the moths escaping from the soil but, at present, all of the chrysalids appear to be healthy.

All fields which were heavily infested with cutworms this spring were so because, last August, the moths chose those fields for egg-laying and just because they happened to be seeded to wheat, barley or oats this spring. The moths are strong fliers and they may fly several miles in search of fields which are suitable for egg-laying. A field which was badly damaged this year is in no more danger of infestation next year than is another near it, which was free from cutworms this spring.

WORM MISTAKES

From correspondence received recently, it is evident that many farmers confuse the red-backed cutworm with other insects, particularly with the Pale Western cutworm, for which a crust on the surface of fallow land during August is the best method for avoiding egg-laying. It is most important that everyone realizes that this is a different insect and that it must be handled in a different way.

To keep Red-backed cutworm moths from laying their eggs in a field the most important thing is to make sure that fallow land is absolutely free from large weeds from about July 21 till the end of August.

The presence of a crust, while it is an advantage, is of far less importance than is keeping summerfallow clean.

Fields in crop this year, and which contain much green growth in August, cannot be protected from the egg-laying moths. If the latter, as appears to be inevitable, are numerous this fall, they are certain to lay large numbers of eggs in them. The only protection which can be given this fall is to cultivate them as soon as possible after harvest.

Deep fall ploughing buries many of the eggs so deeply that the minute cutworms which hatch from them in the spring cannot reach the surface before they die of starvation. We do not advocate deep fall ploughing as a general practice. It is, however, the only fall conducted operation which destroys cutworms of which the eggs are already laid.

Applied Science at the University of Alberta.

He began his apprenticeship and training as an air engineer with the Edmonton Aero Club in 1929, and since completing his training there has been associated with Independent Airways, Northern Air Transport and United Air Transport. He obtained his air engineer's license in 1931. Last October he was transferred to Aircraft Repairs when the company was formed.

Art Trotter was born August 5, 1902 at Fort Saskatchewan and received his education in schools there. In 1916 at the age of 14 he started work as a mechanic.

AIR FUTURE

In 1929 he, too, saw the future in aviation, and joined the staff of Rutledge Air Service in Calgary as an apprentice air engineer. After he had obtained his license he was associated with Canadian Airways in Calgary when they were carrying the airmail on the prairies in 1931-32. In 1932 he came to Edmonton to join the maintenance staff of Mackenzie Air Service, and was with them until he was transferred to Aircraft Repairs last October.

EIGHT GET JOBS

Appointment of Gray and Trotter to T.C.A.'s staff raises to eight the number of men who have gone from Edmonton to Winnipeg to help make the new service a success.

Cornelius "Casey" van der Linden and Richard Leigh, both of Canadian Airways, joined the T.C.A. staff of Air Engineers last winter. Capt. Maurice "Moss" Burbidge, former pilot instructor for the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club, joined the ground staff early this summer, and Art Rankin and Jack Wright of Canadian Airways and Marlowe Kennedy of Mackenzie Air Transport joined as pilots during the winter.

Prizes for Five Best Drawings — FIVE COMPLETE ART COURSES FREE, including drawing outfits. (Value of each course, $215.00.)
FREE! Each contestant whose drawing shows sufficient merit will receive a grading and advice as to whether he or she has, in our estimation, artistic talent worth developing.
Today design, color and illustrating influence the sale of most merchandise. Trained commercial artists have, therefore, become important in industry. They are in demand, — well paid — machines can never displace them. Artistic talent is comparatively scarce. If you can draw, why waste this rare gift? Train yourself to do work for which nature has fitted you and which few people can do. Success nowadays comes easier to those who develop natural ability. We have trained many young men and women now capable of earning up to $5,000 yearly as artists. Use this opportunity to test your talent. Read the rules and send us your drawing.
RULES: This contest open only to amateurs, 16 years old or more. Professional commercial artists and Federal students are not eligible. 1. Make drawing of girl 5½ inches high, on paper 7 inches high. Draw only the girl, no lettering. 2. Use only pencil or pen. 3. We return no drawings. 4. Print your name, address, age, occupation on back of drawing. 5. All drawings must be received by July 30th, 1938. Prizes will be awarded for drawings best in proportion and neatness by Federal Schools Faculty.

Manhattan's Skyscrapers Far Too Tall to Suit Young Prairie Girl

HAT CHECKER TAKES PLUNGE OF 6 STOREYS

Firemen Ready With Net, But Third Floor Window Standing Open

NEW YORK, July 9—A blue-eyed blond from Saskatoon on the Canadian prairies rested in a hospital bed today and vowed she'd had all she wanted of Manhattan's tall buildings for one lifetime.

What's more, Miss Muriel Strong, 24, and five foot two, weight 109, was able to state definitely that when you are dangling from a sixth storey window of a midtown hotel and a slight young man holding your hand gasps that he can't hold on much longer, you don't think of your past, you think only of your future.

HAT CHECK GIRL

Miss Strong, a model who came to New York seeking fortune and compromised by taking a job as a hat check girl in a night club, made that discovery early Friday after she had been sitting on the windowsill of a hotel room.

She had lost her hat check job a couple of weeks ago and was visiting a friend, Sydney Smith of Los Angeles, in the hotel.

"I was sitting there on the window," said Miss Strong, "and I was half way out, on the ledge, balancing. It was a French window, one of those that open all the way out, and I had my feet up in the air," she said, "and Sydney told me to get off I guess I was a little startled and I lost my balance.

GRABBING LIKE MAD

"I remember screaming," she said, "and I was grabbing like mad. I managed to grab the windowsill, and then Sydney came dashing across the room and he grabbed my wrist.

"It seems as if I was holding on for hours," said Miss Strong. "I could hear people shouting for me to hold on and it made me even more scared than I was.

"Well," she said, "there I was hanging, and all these dopes yelling for me to hold on, and then I heard Sydney say something about firemen and a net, and I looked down, and there were a lot of firemen, holding on to something under me, way, way down, and it didn't look any bigger than a handkerchief.

ONLY OF FUTURE

"Sydney was saying he couldn't hold me any more, and then I heard them yell for me to drop. I didn't want to let go of Sydney, but I would have fallen anyway, so I let go, and he let go. What did I think of when I was falling? Nothing, I tell you. I was too scared; I did not think of the past, I thought of the future.

"I would have been all right, I guess, if only that window on the third floor wasn't open. I struck it an awful blow, and then I didn't remember anything until I was on the sidewalk. I don't remember hitting the net at all."

Nules Captured By Franco: Defenders Dynamite Churches

Insurgents Make Big Gain Through Heavy Gunfire—Loyalists Flee Walled Town

ZARAGOZA, Spain, July 9.—The insurgents Friday night claimed to have captured Nules, Spanish government stronghold on the Castellon-Valencia road, and important point in General Franco's drive on the Mediterranean seaport of Valencia.

Nules, only 15 miles northeast of Sagunto via the coast road, was occupied by General Garcia Valino's Galician troops shortly after nightfall, the Insurgents claimed.

BLAST CHURCHES

Insurgent spokesmen charged the defenders dynamited all churches in Nules before retreating southward.

Capture of Nules, last large town before Sagunto, climaxed several weeks of intensive fighting on the Mediterranean front.

Generel Franco's Moorish shock troops, after a spectacular advance through an open field sprayed with murderous cross fire from Government machine guns, cleared the path earlier Friday.

POWER-DRIVE

The outskirts of the town were overrun by General Aranda's fast-moving columns, who occupied heights dominating it from both sides of the coast road, while the Moors were preparing a final power-drive against sandbagged trenches protected by barbed-wire.

The government's national defence ministry issued a communique in Barcelona that its forces had abandoned the walled town and had taken up new positions to the south on the road to Sagunto.

8 MILLION IN FRANCE READY FOR WARFARE

tions to protect the civilian population of Paris and other cities against air attack.

Thousands of men are working on the construction of roads leading out of Paris, wide enough to accommodate eight lines of automobiles. Using these roads, the three million inhabitants of the capital could turn Paris into a deserted city in a few hours.

Every office building in Paris must be equipped with steel or wooden shutters so that no stray gleam of light will offer a target for air raiders. Busses are equipped with curtains.

Air raid cellars have been built in courtyards of the foreign office, the ministry of war and all other important government buildings, and, if attacked, France could maintain an underground government indefinitely.

BURIED GOLD VAULTS

For 11 years the Bank of France has been building gold vaults, an eighth of a mile deep in places and protected by a subterranean lake. War materials factories, once concentrated in a 10-mile belt around Paris have been decentralized.

Regularly, some 20,000 young men—clerks, salesmen, office workers and others—go underground to brush up their knowledge of the mazes of the Maginot Line.

Many of these reservists see little of the sky for two weeks. They take some of their meals five storeys below ground level.

BACKBONE OF ARMY

These young men, who go to the Maginot Line in groups, are the backbone of an army of 8,000,000 men which France could mobilize immediately upon declaration of war. France can also draw upon a huge pool of black warriors in her African colonies, and can equip them from a huge reserve of war materials.

Reports say 10,000,000 rounds of shells for light and heavy artillery are buried near the border to supply the Maginot Line.

Afloat, France probably still has the best navy of any continental nation, though Italy is rapidly catching up. Strong in light cruisers, France also leads in the number of submarines. She has seven capital ships afloat and another one, the Strasbourg, is to go into service soon. Two 35,000-ton ships, the Jean Bart and the Richelieu, will be ready for service by 1940 or 1941.

AIR SECRECY

Like other nations, France keeps air force details secret, but a year ago parliament was told the French air fleet was second only to that of Soviet Russia. France is supposed to have at least 3,000 warplanes.

Frenchmen, living under the constant dread of war, are inclined to be philosophical about it. Air raid warnings in doorways remind the French that they may have war at any time. The cost of preparedness is constantly before them.

And for that reason many of them take the same attitude toward "la guerre" as people in other countries do towards payment of their income tax, as something that is unpleasant but inevitable.

Secret Orders Given To Increase Air Force

LONDON, July 9—Because of France and Russia's threat to fight if German troops invaded Czechoslovakia in May last, Field Marshal Goering has decided to accelerate preparations for "lightning war" designed to paralyze a future enemy within a few days of the start of hostilities.

An extraordinary increase in German air fleets has accordingly been secretly sanctioned this week combined with big additions to anti-aircraft defences.

The present German first line air force numbers 3,000 modern machines and the monthly output approximates 350. But this is considered by Hitler and other Nazi leaders as insufficient and it will be doubled as soon as possible. The immediate effect will, of course, be the intensification of both British and French armament programs.

That Britain is not so far behind the rest of the world in the quality of high speed, long-range bombers is evident Saturday.

This is only the beginning, for later in the year an attempt will be made to beat the Russian long distance north polar record by a non-stop flight in formation from Egypt 8,000 miles to Australia—a performance which will put Britain ahead of other nations in the use of aircraft for long distance bombing purposes. Already these machines could bomb any European capital and return to Britain within a few hours.

Another aspect of British air defences on which rapid work will be done is the reconstruction of 20 additional cruisers as anti-aircraft ships.

In Hospital

MR. JUSTICE FRANK FORD

VANCOUVER, July 9—Hon. Mr. Justice Frank Ford of the appelate division of the supreme court of Alberta, was in hospital here last night with recurrence of a chronic ailment which relatives said was "not serious."

Mr. Justice Ford arrived here from Edmonton with his wife Sunday on a holiday trip. He was taken ill Tuesday and removed to hospital.

J. J. Kerr, a brother-in-law, said the illness was a recurrence of a previous ailment and was not considered serious. He did not know how long Mr. Justice Ford would be in hospital.

SERVICE GROUP IS FORMED FOR TRAFFIC SAFETY

A Civic Safety Council, composed of representatives of the city's service clubs and public service organizations, has been formed under the sponsorship of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, it was announced Saturday.

Aims of the Council will be the launching of an educational campaign through the public schools, the press and public meetings to impress the citizens of Edmonton and particularly children of the dangers and problems of traffic under modern conditions.

Co-operating with the Junior Chamber are: The Alberta Motor Association, the Chamber of Commerce, City Police, Gyro Club, Kiwanis Club, Cosmopolitan Club, Lions Club, Kinsmen Club and Federation of Community Leagues.

Aviation Men Enjoy Smoker Friday Night

More than 100 pilots, air engineers and aviation enthusiasts attended a smoker held in the Moose Hall under the auspices of the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Flying cub Friday evenling.

The smoker was unique in that it was neither an annual affair, nor did it celebrate any particular occasion. Only two speeches of the evening, given by Cy Becker, president of the club and Ken Kennedy, pilot-instructor, lasted less than one-half minute each. Nobody could remember what they said.

ABERHART IS FORCED FROM HIS PLATFORM

Hecklers At Okotoks Provide Wild Meeting When Premier Speaks

OKOTOKS, Alta., July 9.—Forced from the platform by continued heckling and wisecracking after he had spoken less than half an hour, Premier William Aberhart concluded his tour of his home Okotoks-High River constituency last night in one of the wildest and most disorderly political meetings held in this province since the 1935 election.

The meeting was held in the Okotoks community hall, with about 700 people present.

After Police Magistrate Ronald Knowles of Okotoks had complied with a request to restore order in the gathering, Premier Aberhart returned to the platform at the request of the chairman, A. J. Cobb of Black Diamond, to conclude his speech.

Though heckling continued intermittently, the premier concluded his address, but in a much shorter form than that in which he had given it at the seven previous meetings on his tour.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers at the meeting, Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, Rev. E. G. Hansell, Macleod M.P., and J. C. Landeryou, Calgary East M.P., were also subjected to continued heckling.

Mr. Landeryou was given such a rough ride by his constituents—Okotoks is in the Calgary East riding—that he could rarely be heard at the back of the hall. He was subjected to a continual barrage of heckling and jeering and laughter, and spoke for only about ten minutes.

Each time the chairman, Mr. Cobb, rose to his feet he also had to undergo a bombardment of heckling.

It was the first time in the history of the Social Credit government that the premier had been heckled to the point where he refused to continue addressing an audience.

The stormy meeting followed a series of seven orderly meetings conducted by the premier and Mr. Tanner in other parts of the premier's constituency since Tuesday afternoon.

AMID WISECRACKS

Mr. Aberhart spoke amid intermittent wisecracks, shouts, and a lot of noise from a group gathered at the back of the hall, where about 100 people were standing.

Finally the premier halted. Looking towards the back of the hall he said "Anybody who can't listen to a man's argument can't have very much of an argument himself."

"There's no use me trying to address an audience if they don't want to hear me," warned the premier.

"Why did you increase our taxes?" shouted a woman in the audience.

The premier replied that only the sales tax had been added, and that tax had been cancelled. His remark was greeted with jeers.

HEARER REBUFFS

Continuing his speech in spite of the heckling Mr. Aberhart dealt with insurance companies. He had just said that a man who went broke and couldn't pay his insurance premium would lose money when a member of the audience shouted out that he had three policies and if he surrendered any one of them he could "get every cent back."

As the meeting threatened to break up in disorder, a member of the Okotoks Social Credit group requested that Police Magistrate Ronald Knowles should take the platform and restore order. The suggestion was greeted by cheers.

Police Magistrate Knowles then walked to the front of the hall and said: "As you know I have never supported the present premier or his policies. But any speaker is entitled to a courteous hearing in this town. The chairman has told you there will be a question period at the end of the meeting. If you will give them a hearing I'm sure they will answer your questions—if they can."

The chairman then called upon Premier Aberhart to continue his speech, and he resumed amid cheers.

After he had continued for a short time the noise from the back of the hall again interfered with the speaker.

As he finished his address the hall again resounded to cheers and boos.

Manion Election Declared Victory Stand Pat Policy

WINNIPEG, July 9.—Election of Hon. R. J. Manion to leadership of the National Conservative party was a victory for the "stand-pat" policy of the past and a win for Quebec, J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader, said last night in addressing the opening of the C.C.F. Manitoba branch's annual convention.

There will be nothing radical in the Conservative policy under the new leader, Mr. Woodsworth charged the Liberal party had taken the place Conservatives once occupied and had become the Conservative party.

SIDE BY SIDE

With respect to social legislation the two old-line parties were side by side. While the C. C. F. stood for social reform, Liberals and Conservatives voted solidly for things as they are.

"The Conservative party has turned down its opportunity to be a reform party and I think that leaves a splendid opportunity for the C. C. F. which is pretty well recognized as the third political party. If we play the game right and are big enough we may become the official opposition to these other two parties.

Angus MacInnis, C.C.F. member of parliament for Vancouver East, told the convention last session of parliament was the "most useless" in history.

Premier Back In City After Speaking Tour

Premier William Aberhart returned on Saturday morning from a several days' speaking tour of his constituency, in the course of which he addressed at least one meeting a day. Discussing his trip he said that all meetings had been largely attended, winding up with one at Okotoks on Friday night. With the exception of the Okotoks meeting all were orderly. At Okotoks, he said, a section of the audience at the rear of the hall interrupted him part way through his speech and the magistrate appealed for order, after which he continued and concluded.

He was accompanied throughout his trip by Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines.

IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

Girl of 19 Accused of Bad Complexion

(Before Mr. Justice Kruschen)

JUDGE: Jane Smith, you have had a fair trial and you have been found guilty of the charge made against you.

PRISONER: Y-y-yes, my lord.

JUDGE: Very well, then. Your crime may not have been deliberate, but it was one of serious neglect. You admit that though you do not get enough time for adequate open-air exercise you have never troubled to take steps to prevent constipation. Your complexion inevitably suffered.

COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENCE: My lord, I protest that there are other causes.

JUDGE: I said that constipation inevitably causes bad complexions; your client admits to the cause and plainly suffers from the effect.

PRISONER: It isn't my fault, my lord, I couldn't help it.

JUDGE: You could help it and you shall help it. This is the first time a charge has been made against you; let it be a lesson to you that young women may not neglect and spoil the good looks that Nature gave them. Your duty to your parents, to your friends, to your future husband is to make the most you possibly can of yourself.

(Here the prisoner covered her face with her handkerchief and was handed a glass of water.)

JUDGE: (continuing): You will be placed on probation for 3 months and I order that you drink one cup of coffee or tea, or a glass of water at breakfast every morning—

PRISONER: But I always do!

JUDGE: (sternly): Don't interrupt! One cup of coffee or tea or a glass of water every morning into which you shall put as much Kruschen Salts as will lie on a 10c piece. You will get rid of constipation and when you do you will never find yourself in your present predicament again.

After consultation with counsel, the judge announced that costs to the extent of less than 1c a day should be borne by the defence. "I believe I am right in saying," said his lordship, "that a 75c bottle of Kruschen contains 96 doses. That is much less than 1c a day."

relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have those salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter sells Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.

The Appeals To London

Under what has come to be known as the Press bill, passed at the session of the legislature last October, Alberta newspapers were to be brought under regulative control of the Chairman of the Social Credit Board. The Credit Regulation bill provided that credit organizations should be operated under the same authority.

These two, along with the Bank Taxation bill, were referred to the Supreme Court of Canada and found to be unconstitutional. The Court also declared the Social Credit Act to be ultra vires, which left the chairmanship of that body a myth, and the Press bill and Credit bill incapable of being put into effect. The legislature at the recent session repealed the Social Credit Act to avoid litigation, and thus abandoned all claim that the Press bill and the Credit bill were law.

The Privy Council accordingly dismissed the proposal that it listen to the lawyers debate these two defunct measures. Mr. Biggar, acting for the Provincial Government, seemed to invite that course when he pled that the bills were "inoperative." Having passed into the shades, they were beyond the jurisdiction of the Court.

The Bank Taxation bill did not depend on the validity of the Social Credit Act. It was thrown out on its merits by the Supreme Court, and will be judged on its merits by the Privy Council, the decision to be made known later.

The Press bill at least leaves behind one tangible memento—a large sized bill of costs. The question is whether the newspapers will have to stand the expense of defending themselves against the abortive attempt to interfere with their liberties. The Judicial Committee did not rule on this point immediately. No ruling should be necessary. In common justice the province should pay the cost of the defensive action thrust upon the papers. They were dragged into court, and through successive courts, against their wills, and without specific offence cited against them. Why should they have to pay the heavy cost of defending themselves?

Whose Liberty Is Secure?

Quebec's famous "padlock law" was not disallowed by the Dominion Government within the time limit, and will therefore remain in force unless the courts find it to be invalid. If the courts are to be asked to make a ruling, the Minister of Justice says this had better be done by a reference based upon a concrete case of enforcement of the law. He does not recommend that the abstract question of validity be submitted for a judicial finding.

The "padlock law" has aroused a good deal of interest outside Quebec, and an almost equal volume of condemnation. This outside criticism has been directed alike against the law itself and against the precedent established by its enforcement in one province. The purpose of the law is to prevent the spread of Communism, by preventing the holding of Communist meetings and the circulation of Communist propaganda. But it does not define what Communism is, nor say by what marks Communist speeches or propaganda are to be identified.

These decisions are left to the discretion of the Provincial Government. And while literature has been confiscated and buildings padlocked as the result of 124 raids, nobody has been brought to trial for offence against the law. Hence those who have suffered have no opportunity to defend themselves, nor to recover damages. All this is a travesty on British justice, which demands that a person be considered innocent until he is proven guilty.

Since few objections to the law have been raised in Quebec, outsiders would be only casually concerned but for the danger that what one provincial Government does another may also do, and that the kind of treatment meted out to Communists in Quebec today may be served out to others tomorrow in some other province. Why not, if political opponents can be subjected to oppression with no opportunity to defend themselves and on the "say so" of whatever group of politicians may happen to get into power?

The criminal code of Canada provides all needed restraints against seditious teachings and subversive movements. So long as they keep within those bounds, Canadians everywhere should enjoy the same rights of freedom of assembly, freedom of speech and freedom of publication. To allow these liberties to be restricted anywhere is to put them in peril everywhere.

The Platform

The two main planks in the platform adopted at the Conservative national convention are—as they needs must be—those relating to the tariff and to monetary policy. The others were incidental or of lesser practical importance. These two resolutions have to do with the basic issues in public policy. By what they contain the objectives of the party are to be known, and it is upon them it must make its chief appeal for popular support.

The clarifying clause in the tariff resolution reads: "This convention affirms the policy of having tariff schedules under scientific investigation by a permanent commission, and that in case it is ascertained that unfair advantage is being taken of any customs duties imposed by such schedules, the tariff commission shall make recommendations, to which effect shall be given by the government, for reducing such rates of duty or for removing them from the tariff schedules."

That is the nearest the delegates came to declaring what kind of tariff they stood for. But the implication is plain enough to excuse the lack of definition. Applied to a distinctly low tariff, the clause would have little or no meaning. Only on the presumption of a distinctively protective tariff would it be necessary to establish this safeguard against exploitation of the consumer. A dog that can't bite doesn't need to be muzzled.

In proclaiming that the consumer would need safeguarding against protected interests under the tariff they wanted, the delegates waived any need to explain that their ideal was a tariff under which the consumer could and would be exploited. In other words, the semi-prohibitive type of tariff established by the Bennett Government, the Borden Government and the Macdonald Government.

On the monetary question the delegates declared for "elimination of duplicating taxation, economy in public services and a sane monetary policy."

Again the convention obviously sought to evade plain committment, and again failed to find language evasive enough to conceal the object. If this linguistic "junk" means anything at all it means "sound money" and nothing but sound money. That was put beyond doubt when the convention rejected an amendment that the Bank of Canada be used to control money and credit so as to adjust paper currency to legitimate requirements and "avoid the confusion and distortion of values, the reduction of real wages, and the distress of all classes of people which follow any abandonment of this principle." That, it is implied, would be contrary to the "sane" money policy the convention called for.

An inflexible money policy and a "Haman's gallows" tariff policy are thus the prescriptions the convention has offered for liquidating the debt "mess", restoring the losses through deflation, stimulating employment, expanding trade, and making the country prosperous. What a hope!

Current Comment

Mr. Roosevelt On Freedom

Speaking to the American people the other night, President Franklin Roosevelt said:

> "I am concerned about the rights of American citizens to assemble peaceably and to express publicly their views and opinions on important social and economic issues.
> "There can be no constitutional democracy in any community which denies to the individual his freedom to speak and worship as he wishes. The American people will not be deceived by any one who attempts to suppress individual liberty under the pretence of patriotism."

This, interpreted as a direct rebuke to Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, a powerful Democratic politician who has been refusing organizations like the C.I.O. and the Socialist party the right to hold meetings in his city, is a hopeful thing. This continent, including the Canadian part of it, has seen all too much forgetfulness recently of what democracy is about, and freedom, but signs are not wanting now of a reaction. It has not come too soon.—Ottawa Journal.

Reindeer Husbandry

About 1933 Canada bought something more than 2,000 reindeer in Alaska and had them herded across the Arctic mountains to the territory adjacent to the mouth of the Mackenzie river. They were to furnish food and occupation to the Eskimos. They were delivered in 1935, the number arriving being 2,370.

Since then they have thrived. They adapted themselves to the new climate and feeding grounds easily and the herd has increased. At a roundup during the past winter it was found the herd numbered 4,000 and late reports indicate that the natural increase this spring will amount to nearly 2,000 fawns.

A number of Eskimos have been employed herding and learning reindeer husbandry. They have acquired some skill and it is now felt that the time has arrived for an extension of the industry and for placing part of it more directly into the hands of the Eskimos themselves.

And so this year plans call for taking 800 head from the main herd and turning them over to several Eskimo families under a white supervisor. They would be moved gradually eastward in the direction of the Coppermine River, and, presumably, still later over the whole of the Arctic regions.

The intention is to set up the Eskimos as reindeer farmers thus ensuring a continuous food supply without greatly interfering with their nomadic habits for reindeer herds can travel easily in the north. However, it should tend towards stability and the creating of permanent residence. Moreover reindeer products should bring revenue on a larger scale than the seal and polar bear hunting of the past.—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date in 1792, Colonel J. Graves Simcoe issued his first proclamation after his swearing as the first lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada. It was purely a formal document declaring that the magistrates and other civic officials should continue in their offices and that the laws of the old Province of Canada should prevail until such time as they might be amended by the legislature of Upper Canada as yet unborn.

It is peculiar to note that the proclamation was dated "from our Government House at Kingston," for as a matter of fact there was no such place, nor was there one until Simcoe went to Niagara and located his capital there. His first "parliament" was opened at Newark (as he had re-named Niagara) on Sept. 17, 1792, a duplicate, so far as Simcoe could make it, of the parliament at Westminster.

It was indeed a "bit of Britain" overseas. Surrounding Simcoe was an official group of people who knew the best culture of the time. He himself had been educated at Eton and Oxford. He could (as Professor G. M. Wrong has told us) write tolerable verse and prose and he played well the part of a great gentleman. Sometimes he was brusque and passionate to the point of rudeness; but everyone knew him to be a man of deep faith and noble integrity. He was trying to "form a nation obedient to the laws, frugal, temperate, industrious, impressed with a steadfast love of justice, of honor, and of public good."

One of his first determinations was the abolition of slavery under the British flag and on this date in 1793 he gave the royal assent to a bill which prohibited the importation of slaves and provided for the freeing of those born in slavery when reaching legal majority. Thus today marks the first blow at the slave trade struck in a British community, something that we should be proud of.

All through his stay in Canada Simcoe manifested his sympathy for fugitive slaves from the United States, and more than once did things as a man which might have been considered "infra dig" for a governor, so determined was he that his country should not reproduce the dreadful scenes which he had witnessed in the south when he was a prisoner of war during the revolution. Of course, he had opposition from some of the great landowners who wanted to keep their slaves and he compromised by permitting those here to continue in servitude, but made it impossible for "gentlemen" to import any more slaves.

This of course turned the "colonial aristocrats" against Simcoe; but he had his way and when he went home was able to boast that under his colony in America any slave could find refuge and safety.

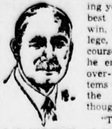
Old Country Letter

By J. E. NORCROSS

LONDON, England—(By Mail)—"Democracy is a very awkward system in many ways and it is difficult to work. It will not work unless everybody does his duty. I see little prospect of that happening until we have the Kingdom of God on earth, and I do not think that is coming yet. We have got to do the best we can," said Earl Baldwin, speaking at Malvern College, Worcestershire, in the course of an address in which he entered a warning against over-enthusiasm for newer systems of government and against the development of class thought.



J. E. NORCROSS

"To my mind the freedom of the human soul is of the essence of religion," he continued, "and that is why I would fight for it in democracy. I do not think you can be a successful democratic leader unless you have a genuine love of the people and a realization of what the ordinary man or woman is and stands for.

"You may have that, and may want to smack them at times all the same. They can be very trying, bless them, but do not let us lose faith in them, because they are as sound as a rock."

Speaking of the nervousness he felt on broadcasting, Lord Baldwin said:

"When I first started broadcasting . . . I felt some trepidation at the idea that I was talking to perhaps ten or twenty million people or more.

"I used to sit in front of the microphone . . . and I tried to visualize at the end of that microphone two or three people sitting listening round a cottage fire—a man and his wife and perhaps a child.

"I used all the force I could to try to get my personality through to that little family, and I seemed to see them and to be talking to them. . . .

"That is how I want you to visualize the people of this country. Do not ever let yourselves get into the way of thinking of them as classes, the working class, the upper class, or the middle class..

"Remember that all over the country they consist of little individual groups of families."

It appears from the "Life of Lord Carson," just published, that Sir John Simon, the present Home Secretary, got his foot on the ladder as a barrister in connection with the Alaska boundary dispute. Carson, who was engaged on the case, had a number of young lawyers devilling for him some of whose names he did not even know.

The work of one of them attracted his attention and he was told it was that of a brilliant young Oxford man. At that very time Simon was suffering from the death of his charming young wife. Carson wrote to him saying that work was the only anodyne and inviting him to spend the remainder of the summer with him at Cowes working on the Alaska case.

They worked there day and night. After that Simon never looked back.

Your Health

By DR. FRANK McCOY

In the heat of the summer season it is often a good plan to cut down on the heavy foods used, substituting the cooling and refreshing fruits and vegetables. An excellent way to make this change in the diet is to make use of melons. They are pleasing in flavor and may well be used as the entire meal.

Melons are composed mostly of water as the water content runs as high as 90 per cent or over. They contain around 6 per cent of sugar and in addition, provide the alkaline-forming minerals. Due to their cooling effect and the naturally sweet taste of the flesh, they are a favorite article of diet when in season. Originating in the hot countries, melons have been known and grown for probably as long a time as any of the vegetables.

While there are literally many hundreds of varieties of melons, when most people think of the word melon they think of either the watermelon or the muskmelon. The muskmelon has possibly been used for food for a longer time than most of our common vegetables, for this member of the gourd family has been used in Southern Asia from time immemorial. It was also known to the Romans and Greeks.

Melons are usually prized in hot countries because they are refreshing and because of the large amount of pure, tastily flavored water which they contain—but they are also valuable in temperate climates because of their cleansing action.

In the crisp, delicate flesh of the watermelon and muskmelon you will find an answer to the problem of what to eat on summer days when the mercury soars in the thermometer. Moreover, you will soon discover that the melon meal is one of the easiest to prepare, as there is no cooking in a hot kitchen, no need to add any complicated dressing, and in fact all that is required is to slice the melon, for this simple meal to be ready. When serving cantaloupe or muskmelon, you will need to remove the seeds from the inside, but even the weariest cook should be able to make this gesture.

It is said that the cantaloupe, favored by so many, gets its name from a town of that name in Italy. The muskmelon was given its name because of the faint musk flavor of the fruit. Much of the pleasure of eating this fruit comes from the delicious flavor. As a rule, those melons which have the most pleasing fragrance also have the best taste.

In choosing any type of melon, it is important to use one which is just ripe enough. If underripe the full flavor is not developed, while if the melon is over-ripe, it may cause digestive distress.

Many people believe they can not use melons as they have found from past experience that this type of food causes gas to form. In such cases I suggest that the melon be used as a meal by itself, without the addition of any other article of food. Those who try this plan usually discover they can use melons without being troubled by gas or flatulence. Try making the melon the only food at the meal and you will probably discover you can use it with only good results.

Now that the hot days are coming, plan to use melons for the luncheon meal some time within the near future.

However the British Government's attitude may be justified, nothing is going to make the British people like this new deal.—Vancouver Province.

SIDE GLANCES — by George Clark

What Is Your Opinion?

A great many interesting letters received by the Editor of The Bulletin are too long for publication. Our correspondents would do well to study brevity. A limit of 350 words must be insisted on.

Toot! Toot!!

Editor, Bulletin: How much longer will the nerves of Canadians stand the constant toot of auto horns, the blowing of whistles, the ringing of bells on the streets? There may be an idea that such racket making is necessary in the movement of traffic. If you think so, go to London.

Traffic on London streets is almost a solid mass of huge, lumbersome busses weaving in and out of crowded, narrow streets, of trams and automobiles. And yet there is never a toot, a whistle or a jingling bell. There it is a case of let the driver beware! You start to cross a street, see an auto coming and naturally start to turn back. The driver stops, smiles and motions you across. No toot to make you jump out of your skin, as you would get in Edmonton. No tooting of a stopped car to call out an awaited passenger! A thousand times more involved traffic than in Edmonton, and yet here the street din goes on unabated, unchecked, unlimited, every driver saying to hell with every other driver, "make way for me."

And again it is to ask, how long will the nerves of Canadians stand the ever increasing strain?

Bank Ownership

Editor, Bulletin: "Jim Brown, Carpenter," says one of the articles in the press by the chartered banks of Canada, "may be one of the supposed 'Big Shots' who own the banks in Canada. He may own a couple of shares or maybe only one."

There is further on a list of 200 occupations represented among the shareholders.

Ownership does not mean anything. What is all-important is not whether "Jim Brown" owns one or one thousand shares but the policy that governs the control of the issue of currency and credit and who directs it. That is what affects all the "Jim Browns."

Baron Rothschild said: "Permit me to control the credit of a country and I care not who makes its laws." The same was said by Premier Mackenzie King: "Once a nation parts with the control of its currency and credit it matters not who makes the nation's laws."

The action of the federal government to own the Bank of Canada is just the first step. It is more important how they are going to exercise the control that arises from ownership. Left in the hands of orthodox finance it is preventing progress and giving the nation a mountain of unpayable interest-bearing debt.

The Jew

Editor, Bulletin: Undoubtedly the Jew is a miracle among the nations.

No people in the history of the world has undergone such persecution. They have, as a nation, been scattered throughout the world, suffered terrible privations, been scourged and ravaged in every shape and form, yet the Jew lives on, and they remain a separate people.

They have not been absorbed into other people or nations. Is not this in itself a miracle.

As a wanderer in all lands, he has been a witness of great events. He saw Babylon, a mighty though short-lived empire, go down to ruin and dust. He saw also the Medo-Persian Empire rise and fall.

He witnessed classic Greece when she was crowned with intellectual triumphs; he lingered among that beautiful, but broken architecture that rises like a tombstone over the grave of her departed splendor.

The Jew saw Rome, the "mighty heart" of nations, sending its own ceaseless life's throb through the arteries of her vast empire.

These have all perished, but the Jew still lives on, the same silent, mysterious, indestructible being.

Until a few years ago we saw the Jew and his land under the devastating heel of the Turk. The Crescent has gone; the Jew still lives on.

The world at present is his home, but it will not always be so.

Will the nations never learn that the Jew will live on notwithstanding all the purges, cruelties and plundering that is going on today in Europe?

Is it not a fact that the Jew always brings prosperity to the country where he is allowed to live in peace? Is not their literature the finest in the world?

The Book of Books, viz., the Bible, is purely a Jewish production. Did not Christ (Himself a Jew) proclaim that "Salvation is of the Jews," showing that, apart from the Jews, there is no salvation?

The nation or power that persecutes the Jew today will surely go the way the former nations and empires have gone. They will only be a memory, and that for a very short time, while the poor, persecuted Jew will live on.

WILFRED GRIMES.

The Vicious Circle

Editor, Bulletin.—Many taxpayers of Edmonton are doubtless puzzled by the mass of figures issued by the city commissioners at the end of each year as the majority of the people are not able to fully analyze and digest a complicated statement of assets and liabilities, and therefore are left wondering what is done with their money.

I wonder if Edmonton citizens fully realize the penalties they pay by the Fortin plan and similar methods of financing.

I have no figures regarding any of Edmonton's financing, but recently Vancouver had occasion to go into the Technical School By-law there and here's what I found out.

The amount of debentures issued for the building of the school on August 1, 1927, was $365,000. The bonds were for a 40-year term at 4½ per cent interest. The yearly interest was therefore $16,425, and the total interest over the 40-year term $657,000, making the total cost of the school $922,000.

That's an example, and Edmonton has many of them.

It is significant that money is being appropriated by governments in a vain attempt to solve unemployment by creating work, but no attempt has been made to solve the problem of decreased purchasing power. We have more than we can consume but we have not the money to buy.

Wages must be cut in order to pay these heavy interest charges. Thus the vicious circle is established and will continue unless and until the taxpayers' policy of demanding results instead of "chewing the fat" about methods, is emphasized.

After numerous vain attempts, two broken clubs and golfer's language, the miracle happened. A wonderful shot carried the ball straight to the green, up to the pin and into the hole.

The two youths stood gaping at one another until finally one said, "I say, Bill, he's going to have a rough time now."

Permanent International Committee To Assist Refugees Is Likely

LONDON WILL BE BASE FOR ORGANIZATION

New Association Would Remain Free From Existing Groups

EVIAN-LES-BAINS, France, July 9.—Great Britain and the United States were understood Friday to have reached a tentative agreement regarding a permanent international committee to assist refugees from greater Germany.

The Anglo-American plan, it was said in well-informed quarters at the 32-nation inter-governmental refugee conference in session here, would provide:

1—That the headquarters of the organization would be in London instead of in Paris, as first suggested.

2—That it remain free of close affiliation with existing refugee groups organized under auspices of the League of Nations.

FIVE POWERS

Great Britain, the United States, France, Argentina and Brazil would be represented on the permanent committee.

Possibility of creating branch offices in the various European capitals also was under consideration, especially in those where the refugee problem is serious or likely to become so.

HASTEN EMIGRATION

Approval of the Anglo-American plan by the inter-governmental conference, which was called by President Roosevelt, would pave the way for possible negotiations with Germany to hasten and systematize emigration of German and Austrian Jews, it was said.

The delegates reported German officials had tentatively offered to allow Austrian Jews to leave with 20 per cent. of their goods as an inducement to speed up emigration for more than 50,000 planning to quit Austria before the end of the year if arrangements can be made.

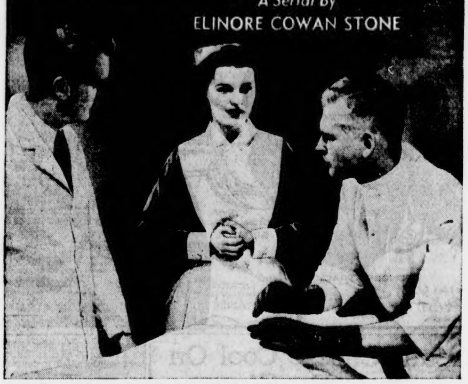
INTERNE TROUBLE

A Serial By

ELINORE COWAN STONE



Tran's heart sank. . . . Now she only understood that something was terribly wrong.

Tran Dearborn Never Knew That First Day When She Blundered Into the Emergency Operating Room That She Was Changing the Course of Her Entire Life.

CHAPTER I

TRAN DEARBORN entered Saint Vincent's as a student nurse without any one's having taken the trouble to warn her that, in a big hospital, the lowest form of human life is a probationer. . . . Lower than the callowest of the internes — although even Tran could see that their assumption of jaunty sophistication was often but a thin cloak to hide panic and a devastating sense of bewilderment.

When Tran's mother had christened her "Tranquility," her husband had warned her that she was inviting disaster.

"And anyhow," he had said, "you don't suppose any one is going to call her that, do you?"

And, of course, no one did. "Tranquility" seemed to preposterously out of keeping with everything that was Tran Dearborn.

Perhaps that was because her slight body, with its restless dancing feet, and hands that would dart into quick gestures unless she held them tightly clasped, seemed to be driven by a nervous dynamo too powerful for its size. . . . More likely it was because of her eyes.

Those wide, dark eyes of Tran's —so out of proportion to her small pale face, with the dusting of golden freckles over a high-bridged nose that might have been haughty if it had not been faintly funny—often gave her a resemblance to a startled fawn on the verge of flight . . . That is, unless you saw them at one of those times when her sense of humor got the best of her most painstaking endeavors to look gravely respectful—while the head nurse was explaining the house rules governing probationers, for instance.

At such times Tran managed to keep her other features composed in an earnestly respectful look by biting her cheeks hard—but her eyes she never could control, even by opening them very wide.

Of course people had not really called her "Tranquility" even in her early school days at Miss Brand's of Virginia, or later, after her mother and father had died and Aunt Clara had taken her from one Continental school to another. . . . All that was before Tran knew that she would have a living to earn with her own hands.

But it was not until she entered the training school at Saint Vincent's that people really began to canvass the delightful possibilities for parody presented by her given name.

One day, during her first few weeks at the hospital, she was taken with a group of other student nurses on a demonstration tour of some of the less exciting wards. The itinerary happened to lead them past the open door of the Emergency reception room at the very moment when a police ambulance clanged up and stopped outside, and two uniformed figures hurried in, supporting between them a limp, bleeding man.

The rest of Tran's group passed demurely on, herded by an older nurse. . . . But not Tran.

This that was happening in Emergency was the kind of thing she had hoped she was coming to the hospital to learn about. Yet up to date she had not had an opportunity to learn about much of anything except unexciting matter like the anatomy of the circulatory system, and how to make beds—and above all, how not to address one's superiors. . . . Among other things—as Tran had discovered after several disheartening experiences — "probes," as the probationers were vulgarly called, did not make brash suggestions to their betters unless asked for them.

Now, as Tran stood entranced with curiosity, some one else came along the corridor and halted outside the door of Emergency. Glancing over her shoulder, Tran saw a tall, handsome man whose spotless white linen emphasized his look of glowing cleanliness and vitality and self-confidence; and whose arrogant nose and deep-set blue eyes suggested a native impatience not too firmly leashed.

Tran's heart missed a beat as she recognized him. Only the day before some one had pointed Dr. Sargent out to her as the most brilliant surgeon—and the most gosh-awful man to work under—in the whole hospital. It was his "gosh-awfulness" that had won him the nickname of "Top Sergeant," clipped for convenience to "Top Sarge".

To make a mistake when you were helping him was as much as your uniform was worth. . . . To be personally requested to assist him at an operation was the equivalent of a royal command. That was the mark Tran had set herself to shoot at.

Now the dark, friendly young interne on duty in Emergency glanced up from the figure the officers had placed on the table and called, "Oh, Dr. Sargent, please! If you have a minute, I'd appreciate some advice, sir."

The tall white-clad figure went into the room. After a hasty glance up and down the corridor, Tran recklessly slid in after him.

The two men bent over, studying the angry red hole in the bare patch the interne had exposed on the patient's right shoulder. Tran, fascinated beyond thought of caution, eased herself closer, until her breath was almost upon the backs of their necks.

"Pretty deep, shouldn't you say, sir?" the interne suggested deferentially. "I think I'll need a probe."

"A probe, by all means," Dr. Sargent agreed.

Tran could hardly believe her ears. "Probes," she had been told, never got within a mile of operations—much less to help with them. Yet the Emergency interne had undoubtedly said that a "probe" was needed; and the terrifying "Top Sarge" had agreed with him. It seemed providential that she was on the spot.

Tran cleared her throat so sharply that they both jumped and turned, frowning at her.

"Perhaps," she said breathlessly, "perhaps—wouldn't I do? I'm one—a 'probe,' I mean," she hurried on —as if her gray dress and voluminous apron were not sufficient advertisement of her low estate.

The young interne's face underwent a sort of convulsion; he turned his back and made a disconcerting noise that sounded like a cross between a sneeze, a sob, and a smothered prayer.

The terrible "Top Sarge" just stood, looking. But something in the way he looked gave the effect of an amazed Olympian surveying from the heights a particularly insignificant worm.

Tran's heart began to sink. She couldn't be mistaken. He had definitely said, "A probe, by all means." . . . Later, of course, she was to learn that when a surgeon asks for a "probe," the chances are at least one to a billion that he does not mean a student nurse, but a surgical instrument used for extracting embedded solids. . . . Now she only understood that something was terribly wrong.

Nevertheless, she persisted. "I mean—well, you did say you needed a 'probe,' didn't you?"

"And even so," Top Sarge spoke with a chilling politeness, "may I ask what you happen to be doing in here?"

Tran put her hands into the pockets of her uniform to keep them from shaking.

"I was—well—looking," she managed to get out. "I"—desperately she strove for a more chatty note—"a hospital is such an interesting place—don't you think?"

Then—because the more frightened she was, the more irresistibly she wanted to laugh—she took her cheeks hard between her teeth; but her traitor eyes got bigger and darker and shinier in her pale little face.

"So interesting," he said, his own eyes like remote blue ice, "that if you're quite through sight-seeing here, I should appreciate your going to do your looking elsewhere."

After a quivering instant, Tran went, with what dignity she could muster.

"And who, Benchley," Dr. Sargent demanded, "would that feather-brain be?"

Young Dr. Benchley grinned.

"Her given name—believe it or not—is 'Tranquility — Tranquility Dearborn," he said. "But she's more popularly known as 'Utility'."

"And what, in Heaven's name, is she doing in this hospital—or any other, for that matter?"

"Well—as her nickname rather neatly implies—just about anything that nobody else wants to do—Heaven help her!"

Whether Heaven heard his prayer or not, not many minutes had elapsed before Tran was to need the benefit of prayer.

Major and Minor Notes

—By John Oliver

Executive of the Women's Musical Club met recently and drafted programs for the organization's regular meetings to be held next season. While the list of subjects to be dealt with is not scheduled for release until the fall, Mrs. Vernon Barford, the president; Mrs. Ernest Meaden and their associates are certain to provide ample in the way of combined entertainment and instruction for club members. Interest in the celebrity series of concerts, which will commence with the recital by John Charles Thomas, is reported as high and it is expected that the great interest of the last season will be exceeded in that which is to come.

Work of the Edmonton Civic Operatic Society on Flotow's Martha, scheduled for fall presentation, is still in progress, with Mrs. J. B. Carmichael, general musical director, putting members of the cast through some strenuous rehearsals.

At best grand opera is recognized as a precarious business and to have the faith in humanity to organize an opera company and take it on tour, is a matter worthy of the warmest commendation. Many companies have been organized in good faith, commenced their tours and have folded up within a short time. Of the many transient companies only the San Carlo opera company well known here by reason of its several visits has survived on this side of the Atlantic, having weathered no fewer than 25 years. Up until now, this company has given about 8,000 performances, which have been heard by 17,000,000 people and which caused no less than $20,000,000 to flow into the box office.

Fortune Gallo, head of the company, knows his public and he knows that the public like the old, favorite operas best—and he gives them what they want. "The old masters knew their business and we cannot improve on them," he says. The operas Aida, Faust, Carmen, Rigoletto, La Boheme, La Traviata and Butterfly have been sung as often as 1,000 times by this company and some of the operas in the repertoire are nearing the 2,000 performance mark.

Mrs. J. R. Carruthers has been the recipient of many congratulatory remarks since a recent piano pupils' recital, when the students participating represented the 11 grades of the Toronto Conservatory of Music from the introductory stage to the A.T.C.H. The program showed the merit of the pupils and displayed an abundance of talent in the class. Little Betty Hagen, seven-year-old violinist (pupil of Alexander Nicol) accompanied by Jean Eagleson, delighted the audience of more than 100 with her solos. Another variation on the program was Evan Wolfe's playing of the composition which won for him the silver medal in the senior piano contest of the Boys' and Girls' fair and also the silver cup donated by Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Gray for the most outstanding boy pianist. At the close little Lois Wolfe, on behalf of the pupils, presented Mrs. Carruthers with a beautiful bouquet of roses. Those taking part were: Lois Wolfe, Ian Graban, Jack Kilgour, Margaret Campbell, Iris Wolfe, J. B. Millar, Shirley MacDonald, Catherine Varey, Mary Varey, Mary Brebner, Frances Thompson, Evan Wolfe, Dorothy Moon, Gwen Sellar.

What's New On The . . . RECORDS

BEING A REVIEW OF THE BEST NOW BEING TRANSCRIBED FOR GRAMOPHONES

By JOHN OLIVER

Novelty is the object of continual search. In this day and age in particular when competition is keen, when people are blase and sophisticated, there is a special effort being made to provide the novel and the unusual. To achieve this is " a feather in the cap" of the person or persons so doing.

In the latest parcel of RCA Victor records, there is a novelty which must attract attention. Here is something widely removed from the ordinary, something by no means commonplace and something that probably will cause considerable discussion.

Reference is made to the album containing a Masterpiece Set of Mozart's quintet for clarinet and strings in A(K.581) played by the Budapest Quartet with the clarinet soloist none other than Benny Goodman, idol of the swing fraternity.

IS UNUSUAL

Here indeed are strange colleagues in the making of a record: the classically-inclined Budapest Quartet and the swingster Goodman, more frequently heard in "jam" sessions and "swinging" the classics than playing them as the classicists wrote them.

Although Victor disclaims any inclination at sensationalism in this combination, nevertheless, the effect, whether intended, is surprising.

Be it here said that in point of fect there is nothing sensational in the matter. Goodman, swingster par excellence as he is, in his playing of this set, proves from his playing of the opening arpeggio, to the last note played, that he is a thorough musician and fully capable of carrying out the heavy task assigned him. His playing throughout is clear-cut, precise, restrained and bearing no semblance to the utterances of a swing king rampant.

Goodman has exercised a restraint most commendable and he justifies his selection for this important work.

It will be of exceptional interest to learn—if such is possible—how the public reacts to this pioneer effort in recording. The best way of determining the success of the venture and the public reaction, is through the record sales and the comparison of sales of this album with others of similar class.

Will there be a fusion of the devotees of Mozart with the swing cats in falling in behind this set? Will the classicists warm up toward Goodman and swing as a result of this album? Will the swing cats find that Mozart is well worth listening to and that he "has something?" Will the classical and swing adherents find some good in one another and sit down together in the common pursuit of music?

TIME WILL TELL

It will be interesting to find out and maybe, one year hence, the Victor people might disclose the sales of this Masterpiece Album No. 452 and how they compare with others.

However, it is unlikely that there will be any great welding of the different sections of music lovers by reason of this set. The "swing cats" will be satisfied that Goodman has justified their confidence in him by being able to hold his own in classical music, while the classical devotees will take comfort in the knowledge that Goodman at least hasn't shown them anything and that there are first chair clarinet men in a good many symphonies who can play as well and some better.

This is a time of year when lighter material is welcome and for those whose tastes run to something stirring, something rousing and martial, there is a 10-inch record of the Boston "Pops" orchestra, under Arthur Fielder, playing John Philip Sousa's Semper Fidelis and Stars and Stripes Forever marches, in an infectious, masterly manner that leaves no doubt as to the orchestras consummate artistry and the merit of the music when artistically performed.

Cream Cheese Cool On Hot Days, By Ginger

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Cold specialties make hot days more bearable. Such things as cream cheese rolls begin to taste especially good.

CREAM CHEESE ROLLS

Two packages cream cheese, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, ½ teaspoon ground ginger, 2 tablespoons thin cream or milk, ¼ pound gingersnaps.

Mix cream cheese, orange rind, ginger and cream together, shape into finger-like rolls 2 inches long or into balls. Roll in sifted rolled gingersnap crumbs. Chill until firm. Serve with salads. Recipe may be halved.

Peanut butter is a family habit. Give it a vacation in a pan of bran muffins.

PEANUT BUTTER-BRAN MUFFINS

One cup bran, 1 cup sifted flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon soda, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 cup sour milk, 2 tablespoons molasses, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons melted shortening, ¼ cup peanut butter.

Mix and sift dry ingredients together and blend with bran. Add beaten egg, mixed with peanut butter, milk, molasses and melted shortening. Stir only until blended. Pour into greased muffin tins and bake in moderate oven (370 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Raisins or dates may be added if desired.

Monday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Blackberries and cream, Canadian bacon, buttered toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Chicken broth in cups, mixed fruit salad, cream cheese rolls, tea, milk.

DINNER: Tomato juice, cold cuts, baked potatoes, baked casserole of new corn and peppers, peanut butter-bran muffins, sliced peaches and cream, coffee, milk.

Camping Excursions Are Included In Many Children's Vacations

By HUGH McCALL

"Personality," says an eminent New York authority on the subject, "is acquired and not inherited." He continues to say that one of the best places for building a fine personality in children is at a summer camp where all are equal and there is no inescapable family favoritism. Personality, too, is an ever increasing factor in the securing of positions in the business world today which all goes to enhance the value a good summer camp can give the growing boy and girl.

With school worries being pushed aside for a two month's lapse, the minds of all generations turn to making plans for summer activity, and every boy and girl hopes that his summer plans will include a camping excursion to one of the many lakes and other suitable camp sites bordering on the capital city.

Camping is a phase in scouting that no boy likes to miss and so annually we find over twelve hundred scouts in this province alone taking advantage of local and provincial camps. Camp training with its background of woodcraft, direction finding and other features make it of inestimable value in later life especially in this country where minds are continually turning northward to regions of unbroken forest and lake land.

HEAVY LOAD

Heaviest load of scoup campers is taken by Camp Woods at Sylvan Lake, official provincial summer camp for Alberta's Boy Scouts. Named in appreciation of the generosity of Provincial Commissioner Hon. Lt.-Col. J. H. Woods, C.M.G., who, in 1932, placed the 116 acre tract of land, seven miles distant from Sylvan Lake town, at the disposal of the Alberta Scout Association. "Camp Woods" is filling an ever increasing need for a summer centre where scouts, rovers and Wolf Cubs may gather for long or short periods during their summer vacations.

In many instances, boys who may have participated in their own troop camps near home add further camping experience at Camp Woods, while the facilities are particularly valuable for Scouts anywhere in the province whose leaders may not be able to arrange a camp for them at home.

On the other hand, many complete troops camp under their own leaders, as separate units, on sites set aside at "Camp Woods." Only one portion of the grounds is reserved as a permanent site for the annual Scoutmaster's Gilwell training camp which is usually held each year during August.

SITE AVAILABLE

When the site was made available to the Scout Association by Commissioner Woods in 1932, two deserted log buildings of the original homestead stood on the property, sadly in need of repair. They were renovated to provide a spacious mess hall for wet days, and a central office for the staff of the provincial Scout Office who have charge of the camp. Since that date, each season has seen structural improvements and a large amount of clearing of the heavy poplar growth, in a carefully-prepared landscaping scheme, which provides a main driveway with radiating trails to open glades for camp-sites facing on the lake.

Soon after the opening, Red Deer Scouting friends provided a fine cabin for the use of their own troop when they wanted to camp, making it available for general use when the open camp was in session. Now, however, a log mess hall, capable of accommodating 120 boys, with a fine kitchen attached, and serving as a gathering place for campfire entertainment on wet evenings, caters to the increasing registrations at the open camp. This log building was erected last year, and the policy of the provincial council will be to retain the pioneer atmosphere of the camp with this type of structure. There is an open-air workshop where bows and arrows, totem pole carving and bead-working on buckskin are favorite spare time activities, a sick bay, and a log pumphouse situated on the highest point of the land.

LOG CABIN BUILT

Up to the present, accommodation for the Scouts has always been in tents. This year, however, an innovation in the form of log sleeping shelters, will gradually replace the canvas, as renewals become necessary. Six of these "Adirondack" open-front shanties have been built this spring by Rovers from Calgary and Edmonton, working under the supervision of an expert log builder, at an estimated cost of $40 each. Measuring 20 feet long by 9 feet deep, and with a height of six feet in the front opening, they are of standard log-cabin construction, with canvas curtains to close the front when necessary. Otherwise, the patrols using them will sleep practically in the open air. Such log "lean-to's" were the favorite hunting lodges in the eastern settlements. No cosier shelter can be imagined, even in severe weather.

Fourth Edmonton, All Saints Brownie Pack held its final meeting of the year on June 27 at All Saints hall when Miss G. Mullen, commissioner for central Edmonton district presented Norma Scanlon, Evelyn and Margaret Schmidt, Ramona Chaplin, Dorothy Thomson, Juanita Garton, Joyce Wilson, Doris Nufer, Robin Munson and Glayds Rowsell with Golden Bar Badges.

Service stars were awarded Jean McNaughten, Juanita Garton and Joyce Morris. Dorothy Thomson won her Sixer Stripes while Joyce Morris, Ramona Chaplin and Juanita Garton each received Second Stripes.

Awards for clean hands competition went to Allison Menzies and Norma Scanlon. Prizes for races were won by Allison Menzies, Audrey Duke, Joyce Morris and Evelyn Schmidt.

Students Hold Enviable Record

BAWLF, July 9—Dorothy Haight, Lillian Sollid, Geraldine Sanden and Rawleigh Robson of the Bawlf Intermediate room were neither absent nor tardy throughout the 1937-38 term.

Miss Dorothy Haight has not been absent nor tardy during her six years of schooling. Miss Geraldine Sanden has a more enviable record, for she has not been absent nor late during her eight years.

Luther Burbank carried on experimental work with plants for more than 50 years.

Interdenominational Societies Co-operate For Local Advancement

By BLAKE MACKENZIE

That almost fifteen years of effort on the part of thousands of Edmonton's young people has not been in vain has been demonstrated by the enthusiasm and goodwill that prevails among the various denominational young people's organizations of the city, as they meet and discuss their work under the Edmonton Interdenominational Young People's Board. All spring and summer groups of young people have been meeting and discussing ways and means for doing better what has already been done well in the past. These groups are the committees in charge of the various activities that are sponsored by the board, and they are carrying on work that was begun in Edmonton in 1925 when a group of young people, drawn from the various churches in Edmonton, met to consider the possibilities of joint action in affairs that were of interest to the young people of all Christian churches, and of collaboration in matters that could best be done by a central board.

VARYING SUCCESS

Since that time, the board has met with varying success. The idea that lay behind the first meeting, however, has remained the mark at which all effort has been directed—that however much creeds and doctrines might differ, young people of the Christian church had one idea, one ideal in common.

Through the harsh years of the depression, the work that could be done suffered as did the plans of many other organizations. Funds were low, expenditures had to be cut, interest flagged, but the fact that the Board survived is alone sufficient evidence that it was on an idea that was inextinguishable.

And in recent years, the Board has proved, time and time again, that it was well conceived. It has been the remark of many of the distinguished church-men who have visited the city, that there exists here a fine spirit of co-operation between the denominations—that that spirit of co-operation and freedom from petty jealousy and strife marks Edmonton as a city apart.

PIONEER MINISTERS

Part of this spirit, of course, may be laid to the door of the pioneer ministers of the west, who came, in the early days, not to minister to a congregation, but to all. But a great part of that spirit may be directly attributed to the work of the Board, in bringing young people together and allowing them to discover for themselves that there was no great difference in their outlook, in their faith.

Today the Board offers a great many things to young people. Adhering strictly to the principle that the Board must help, and not hinder the work of the young people's organization in the individual church, the Board has developed a variety of activities, which include a course in Leadership Training, a Sports League which offers a trophy for competition in bowling, and in softball in summer, a Debating League in which many a hard-fought parliamentary war has been figured, a summer week-end camp over Labor Day, which is eagerly anticipated by many of Edmonton's young people, and finally an opportunity for young people to meet and to know one another, through the various social activities that have become an integral part of the Board.

On Sunday, Mass will be held in St. Joseph's College chapel at half past seven o'clock and half past nine o'clock.

Miss Alice Sieman is visiting with her sister, Mrs. A. A. Riedell at her home in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan at present.

White Chiffon Fashions Bridal Gown Worn By Miss Dorothy Prausa

Gown of chalk-white chiffon fashioned in the classically simple manner of the frocks of the Empire period, enhanced the slim beauty of Miss Dorothy Antoinette Prausa when, at a charmingly arranged ceremony in St. Joseph's cathedral early on Saturday morning she became the bride of Mr. Stanley Edward Moher, also of this city.

The frock, worn over white whisper taffeta, fell into a graceful train at the back, and from a juliette cap circled with tiny orange blossoms, a veil of net drooped softly about the bride's shoulders. Her flowers were a bouquet of white roses, encircled with forget-me-nots.

WIDELY FETED

Interest of friends in social, business and sporting circles is claimed by the ceremony, and the bride, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Prausa, has been widely feted prior to her marriage.

An enthusiastic member of sporting circles, the bridegroom, who, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moher, has played a major part in the development of hockey in the city. Coach last year of the Junior Edmonton Athletic club, Mr. Moher is known in senior hockey circles in Edmonton, and the well wishes of a wide circle of friends attends him at his wedding.

Performed at ten o'clok in the morning, the service was conducted by Rev. Father A. Naessens, O.M.I.

FLORAL SETTING

For the ceremony, the spacious church was decorated with a profusion of pink and white peonies arranged with taste about the altar front. Clusters of white roses marked the guest pews and during the lovely service, organ music was provided by Mrs. Olsen. Singing very sweetly, Mrs. Sutherland chose for her solo "Ave Maria" and "Because".

Sisters of the bride—Miss Margaret Prausa and Miss Kathleen Prausa—were bridesmaids and were attired in summer frocks of net and lace, with full skirts of net, and tight fitting bodices of lace. Pastel shades of turquoise blue and of peach of the gowns were reflected in the veils worn by each, crowned by clusters of cut flowers.

COLONIAL BOUQUETS

Their flowers were colonial bouquets, comprised of gladioli and sweet pea blossoms.

Flower girl, Miss Dorothy Jean McIlhargey, was dressed in a frock of palest pink organdy with a band of tiny flowers in her hair and carrying in her hands a nosegay of pink and blue flowers.

Mr. Edward McHugh was groomsman, and escorting the guests to their places were Mr. Clarence Moher and Mr. John Ducey.

Mr. Walter John Prausa gave his sister in marriage.

100 GUESTS

Following the ceremony a reception to one hundred guests was held at the home of Madame P. A. Dow in 113 street.

Miss Martha Morkin of New York and Miss Nora Morkin, aunts of the bride, received with the bridal party. Mrs. Frank Moher wore for the occasion of her son's wedding a fashionable gown of black lace, with black accessories and corsage of deep red roses.

Miss Martha Morkin chose for the occasion a gown of maroon chiffon made in the redingote manner, with which her accessories matched charmingly. Miss Nora Morkin was dressed in navy blue sheer, with rose accessories.

Pink and white was the color scheme of the bride's table, which was centred by the tiered wedding cake.

TO SAN FRANCISCO

Later Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Moher left for San Francisco, where they will spend their honeymoon.

To travel the bride wore a tailored frock of dusty rose, felt hat to match, top coat and accessories of navy blue.

To Be Wed In Early August

MR. ANDRE DECHENE

MISS THERESE DESSUREAU

Foretelling a wedding of wide interest in social, business and political circles in central Alberta, the engagement is announced today of Therese Dessureau, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Dessureau of Bonnyville, to Andre M. Dechene, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dechene of Bonnyville, formerly of Edmonton. Both the bride and bridegroom-elect are popularly known in the Capital City, Miss Dessureau having graduated from the Edmonton Normal school before going to teach in Bonnyville, and Mr. Dechene taking prominent part in activities at the University of Alberta where he is acting president of the Law Club.

Parents of the bridegroom-elect made their home in Edmonton for many years, and are prominently known in political as well as in business and social circles, for Mr. Dechene is a former member of the Legislative Assembly.

Saturday, August 6, is the date selected for the wedding, which will take place in Bonnyville.

the social round . . . . .

EDMONTON is a beautiful city. Have you ever seen it? You've lived there most of your life you say? Well, so have we, but we hadn't really appreciated the home town until just recently when some visitors undertook to "show us around." We went canoeing, and our exclamations of delight at the scenery on our own Saskatchewan prompted one of our hosts to say, "Oh, I didn't know you were a stranger too!" We blushed with shame. But who could be expected to know that there was picture post-card scenery right at hand when a week-end that is not spent at a beach or in the mountains is counted a total loss?

All roads lead out of the city on a holiday, and like an agreeable sheep we have always just followed the line of least resistance. But not any more. Not after watching the Night glide over the Saskatchewan, her trailing scarves of amethyst and ebony making faint shadows on the darkening water. Not after seeing the moon peer over a fringe of evergreens to catch a glimpse of her own lovely image in the water-mirror. Not after floating along in a silver silence broken only by the splash of a paddle, the tinkle of a laugh or the singing of parties gathered around the camp-fires crimsoning the sky.

Little cabins built by the various canoeing clubs are discernable only by their rustic steps rambling over the river bank, but in many of them there are round lights, shining through the trees like so many tiny moons hanging on the branches. A great peace soothes the brow of the hillside; the noises of the day subside one by one, and we are caught in the mood of David Herbert Lawrence's poem, "Twilight":

Darkness comes out of the earth
And swallows dip into the pallor of the west;
From the hay comes the clamor of children's mirth;
Wanes the old palimpsest.

The night-stock oozes scent,
And a moon-blue moth goes flittering by:
All that the worldly day has meant
Wastes like a lie.

The children have forsaken their play;
A single star in a veil of light
Glimmers: litter of day
Is gone from sight.

CROSSING a continent to say "How do you do" to your next door neighbor was the unique experience of Lady Judith Merrick of Surrey, England. Arriving in Banff, the first name she heard was that of Miss Ruth Kitson, great granddaughter of Lord Strathcona, also from Surrey, England, and a very next-door neighbor! Lady Merrick left her home in Surrey some little time ago to visit Bermuda, and had continued on to Canada, and finally to Banff, and had not known her young friend (she had known her from babyhood) was travelling in this country.

London Music Examiner Is Entertained

Happy impressions of a winning personality and a delightful sense of humor were left with members of the Alberta Music Teachers' Association when, on Friday evening at a reception arranged in the Macdonald hotel, Mr. Maurice d'Oisly of London, England spoke to them.

Mr. d'Oisly, examiner of senior candidates for the Royal Schools of London, England, has been a visitor in the city during the past week and will remain for a short while until the conclusion of the examinations.

Mentioning just a few of the many places in which he has examined candidates, South Africa, Gibraltar, Malta, India, Bermuda and West Indies, Mr. d'Oisly told amusing little anecdotes which have featured these visits.

He brought greetings from the board of examiners to the teachers, and stated that he was always so pleased to meet the people in the cities where he examined, for it was through them that he came to know the country.

Mr. V. A. Beringer, whose uncle is a former teacher of Mr. d'Oisly at the Royal Schools of London and who was described by the examiner as the "finest teacher of piano at that time," offered a vote of thanks to the speaker.

Guests were received by Mrs. T. Winslow Hamilton, president of the association and presiding at the tea urns were Miss M. Jackson and Miss Florence Teets.

Serving were Mrs. R. Spencer, Miss Thelma Dobson, Miss Betty Rose, Miss Roxyana Phillips and Miss Catherine Marshall.

Others present at the affair were Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Eagleson, Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, Mrs. James Walker, Mrs. P. L. de Bel, Mrs. W. B. Tranter, Mrs. R. E. Dixon of Ohio, Mrs. W. E. Shillabeer.

Miss Vivian Jones, Mrs. J. R. Carruthers, Madame Zelie Delsart, Miss R. E. MacArthur, Mrs. J. W. Sherwin, Mrs. O. J. Walker.

Mr. Vernon Barford, Miss Gwen Seller, Mr. V. A. Beringer, Miss W. Parker, Mrs. J. E. Rymer.

Madame Le Saunier, Mrs. Robert Cockburn, Mrs. J. W. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Humphries and others.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl of 19 and finished high school in June. I am engaged to a boy who is a freshman in college, and he wants us to be secretly married and both go on to college. But here is my problem: My parents are willing to send me to college if I will make something of my education after I get it—teach or do something like that, but they say they do not want to waste any money on it if I am going to get married as soon as I get my degree.

RENA.

Answer:

Don't get married secretly, Rena. Don't marry any man until he is in a position to acknowledge you as his wife, and to marry you openly and decently in the sight of all men.

No good ever comes of a secret marriage, and it always leaves the girl's reputation bedraggled. This is a suspicious world, my dear, and it always looks askance at a belated marriage certificate.

If you and your sweetheart get married secretly and go off to college together, it is not possible for you to avoid gossip, so either put off your marriage altogether until you have finished college or else be frankly married. The hole-and-corner business and meeting around for stolen rendezvous will do neither one of you any good.

Besides, the situation will be filled with complications that will give food for jealousy, as you will be expected to join in the social activities of the school. If you have dates with boys and your husband has dates with girls the green-eyed monster will have a fine opportunity of getting in his deadly work. So I should strongly urge you to put off your wedding day until after you have finished school.

There are many married couples in the coeducational schools, and the teachers report that they do good work. However, this is largely a matter for your parents to decide, as you have no means of making a living and are dependent upon them for support. Certainly, it seems to me that matrimony is for grown-ups and not schoolgirls and boys; that a man should not ask a woman to marry him secretly, or otherwise, until he is able to stand on his own feet and support a family.

I think that your father is mistaken in his idea that there is no use in educating a girl if she is going to get married. To be a good wife and mother is the most complicated profession in the world and one that requires a liberal education in every direction. And then some. Certainly the woman who must wrestle with the high cost of living and budget her income to the last penny needs to be a mathematician and a political economist. Certainly a woman who brings children into the world should have a knowledge of biology, physiology, hygiene and a speaking acquaintance with the germ theory.

Certainly the woman who cooks should have more than an elementary knowledge of chemistry. Certainly the woman who must deal with the moods and tenses of a man should be a psychologist. And the woman who must spend much of her time alone should have a cultivated mind and be a reader so that she may never be lonely and so on.

Furthermore, marriage does not automatically settle all of a woman's problems and assure her of plenty and prosperity as long as she lives. Sometimes husbands die leaving their wives with a house full of little children to support. Sometimes husbands get sick and cannot work and their wives have to step into the breach and take care of them. Sometimes husbands turn out badly and women are forced to divorce them.

Sometimes men are just plain lazy and no-account and can't make a living. Many a married woman has ten times the necessity of knowing how to make a living than a girl has, and any father who doesn't provide his daughter against such a contingency fails in his duty to her.

DOROTHY DIX.

Raising A Family

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

What is an anti-social child? One who defies all law? This is the popular concept of the term. Not so, however, although such a child may dislike law. The real anti-social child is merely a misfit. He prefers his own made-up world to the real world of society in which he must live.

O. R. Barton

He shuns people. He dislikes mixing. He would prefer to live apart from his family. He may be like this partly from a natural sensitiveness, or he may become this way from wrong handling. He finally begins to pick flaws in the world as it is. He won't conform to school. He is a problem in his home. He takes the law into his own hands, either gently, by retirement, or more aggressively, by license.

Many "good" little fellows or "nice" little girls are anti-social. They are not enjoying their days very much, but they keep it to themselves. They invent ways to be happy, removed from the wear and tear of life as it normally happens.

In time, however, the rift widens. Then others begin to notice that Henry or Harriet is developing open resentment against the rules and regulations around them. A pampered child may become turned against a society that demands too much, or what he considers too much. On the other hand, our greatest number of anti-social children come from families where love and confidence are lacking. Where their lives are so unhappy they associate all pressure with unfairness, and become convinced that obedience is a burden everywhere. The law of the land becomes an obsession. The laws of decency even are meaningless.

The maladjusted child, the boy or girl who has no chance to live a natural childish existence, becomes an anti-social child. What a pity that we have such hordes of youngsters feeling that this world is a poorly run place and that their own ideas of conduct are better. Sometimes, I have no doubt, they are. We have robbed children of so much spontaneous living and substituted artificial standards for them to meet, that rebellion is the natural result.

KINDNESS IS A CURE

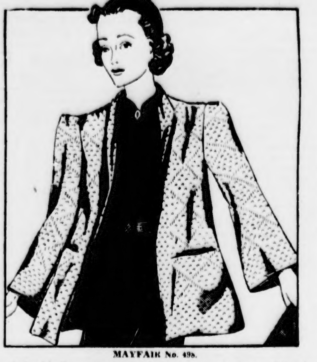
I have seen a child tagged with the anti-social ticket, taken from his former unhappy home, and placed with hearty, kindly people who knew what was needed. These foster parents began by trusting this child. They provided both liberty to his liking and work with an interest behind it. Plenty of fishing and hiking to wear out animal spirits. A respect for his ideas. Praise for his successes. Expectancy for his help and co-operation.

This boy lost his dislike of law and order. He learned very slowly but surely that obedience and conformity were a comfort. The new beginning worked the miracle. He became an entity in the family and the community. He began again from scratch without any hangovers to haunt him. He was understood and put on his own honor. It was there all the time.

These children are problems. It is hard to discover what lies underneath a child's thoughts and actions. I suggest the wise psychiatrist for the child who has lost his social bearings.

Seed Stitch Knit Coat

By MAYFAIR



MAYFAIR No. 49s.

A hand-knit swagger topper is every woman's dream. Ideal for motoring, to wear over sports clothes, with town clothes and can even be worn over an evening frock. While white is a perennial favorite, pastel colors are in high favor at the moment. Roll collar, three-quarter length set-in bell sleeves, slit pockets, squared shoulders and finger-tip length, are some of the features. Knit of moss stitch with diagonal lines.

The pattern includes easy-to-follow knitting instructions without abbreviations in size 16, with stitch tension for sizes 14 and 18 years.

Send 15 cents for this pattern to The Edmonton Bulletin, Needlework Dept., Edmonton, Alberta.

"Over The Teacups"— Twenty Years Ago

From the Files of The Edmonton Bulletin

NO LONGER are the men the swagger folks they used to be about the Midway attractions at the Exhibition, at least with the Johnny J. Jones Shows which come to the Fair this week. Johnny J. finds that he can get along very nicely with women forming the majority of his staff. There are fully two-thirds more women employed in his shows than formerly, due to the lack of available men, and he finds the popularity of his attractions diminishing not in the very least.

There are now women ticket sellers where there once were only men—and no one can say that they fail to make themselves heard. Mrs. W. F. Adams of the underground Chinatown; Margaret Gast of the Motordrome; Princess Dixie, the lion tamer, of the Animal Show; Mrs. W. H. McGerry of the "Bug House"; Mrs. Dakota Max of the Wild West Show, and Mrs. Captain LaBelle of the Eskimo Village, all help to put up and take down their tents, and assist generally in work about the shows, which was formerly done by extra hands.

One unusual thing about the Minstrel Show is that there is a majority of women in it, and "Mista Bones" may soon be a legend, so surely are the women replacing the blackface artists.

The new era in women's work and citizenship has been significantly recognized in the first report of the executive committee of the Canadian Industrial Reconstruction Association. The executive committee recommends that a "post graduate scholarship or fellowship be offered in the department of economics at McGill, Toronto and Manitoba universities, successively, open to women graduates of any Canadian university, for the purpose of carrying on research work of an economic character in the industrial or home-making occupations of women."

It is also proposed to offer a matriculation scholarship at various Canadian universities for essays by girl matriculants on the economic importance, from a national standpoint, of household buying, or on the training of girls for skilled employment. Prizes are to be offered in the different provinces for essays by school children on national industries or on the value of trade training in finding advantageous employment.

Haste Makes Waste In Waist Reducing Plans

By ALICIA HART

Exercises to reduce the waistline and make the stomach flat should be done slowly, deliberately. Try several, decide which three or four you don't mind doing, then repeat each one from twenty to fifty times every day.

Here's an exercise that a good many leading beauty salons recommend to their customers.

Lie flat on the floor with arms at sides. Now, without moving hands and keeping ankles together, slowly raise legs from the floor until they are perpendicular with your body. Rest a second. Then lower legs to the floor. Both of these steps MUST be done very slowly. Otherwise, no benefit will be derived. Also, both will be quite difficult at first. Your stomach muscles will ache slightly during and after the exercise. However, if you keep at it, repeating the steps three times the first day, four the second and so on until you are doing them twenty times daily, you will most certainly attain a flatter look through your middle.

Posture is important, of course. Many a woman whose stomach seems quite large wouldn't appear overweight if she learned to stand and carry her body correctly.

There should be no exaggerated hollow in the middle of your backbone. Once this is eliminated, your stomach will be flatter and your hips will look more slender. And if shoulders are square, chest high, the diaphragm will not have a slightly puffy appearance.

To get rid of a hollow in the centre of your spinal column and to learn how to keep your chest up and out, do this exercise once a day for two weeks and once a week thereafter.

Lie on the floor with arms at sides and knees bent so that weight of the legs rests on the balls of the feet. Press the centre of your backbone firmly against the hard surface. To accomplish this tilt the base of the spine slightly upward away from the floor. Notice that chest now is raised and that stomach seems to sink in. Hold the position for a few seconds. Relax and repeat. When you get up, try to stand as you were lying—with stomach in, chest high, middle of backbone quite straight and base of the spine tilted forward.

THE WORLD NEEDS SCHOOLS FOR TRAINING OUR YOUTH IN THE DELICATE MANIPULATION OF MARRIAGE

American men find their wives cold. They find that many a pretty, apparently affectionate, girl becomes distant and calculating after marriage, and seems to consider wedlock as a springboard from which she may vault lightly into several desirable things, that are not, strictly speaking, marriage at all.

THERE are too few loving wives in the world. There are many beautiful ones, in these beauty-parlor days; some smart ones; some capable ones. There are wives who play golf and bridge better than their husbands do, and there are many wives who are better business managers and who contribute more than their share to the household expenses or even sustain them entirely.

But the indispensable gold of true marriage is love, and it almost seems sometimes that true love is an art, like any other art, and has to be studied and developed and carefully handled if it is to survive the shocks and storms of modern living.

Wives, hundreds of them, write me every year, bewailing the tragedy of lost love, of love dead and cold in the grave of humdrum everyday living, love chilling and dying under the pressure of nursery claims, financial pressure, or—even sadder!—love forgotten in the getting-used-to-one-another that is part of married life, the ending of glamor and suspense and romance, the difficulty of adjusting two healthy, egotistical, selfish, spirited young natures to the hard necessity of living as one.

"It is years since my husband has shown any real affection, or paid me any of those little attentions that used to make my life so wonderful," writes a Florida wife. "John and I get on well enough; we don't quarrel," complains another wife in Manchester, England, "but we do bore each other; we are secretly always straining at the yoke." A third wife, this one in Nevada, puts her complaint in the form of a question. "Why," she demands, "aren't all marriages automatically dissolved on the fifth anniversary? Do you honestly in your heart know of any couple to whom that wouldn't be a blessed relief? Or suppose I put it this way. Don't you believe that if marriages WERE automatically dissolved on the fourth or fifth anniversary, and devoted couples had to be re-married at that point, it would lend great spice to the relationship, and give women, and men too for that matter, a real sense of freedom? I truly believe I will always want to be Ben's wife. But oh, how I hate the feeling that no matter what I want I never can be anything else! Now if I felt that in a year and two months Ben would be perfectly free to walk out on me, how I'd begin to value him, and to cook the things he likes and to be kinder to his mother!"

This woman throws in, you'll notice, the casual phrase, "and men too for that matter." She may well do so, for men are as articulate on this point as women are. American men find their wives cold. They find that many a pretty, apparently affectionate girl becomes distant and calculating after marriage, and seems to consider wedlock as not being an end in itself, but a springboard from which she may vault lightly into several desirable things that are not, strictly speaking, marriage at all. Things like all-day freedom for beauty-parlors and bridge games, freedom to run bills and stay out late and go off on week-end parties without fear of the censure that dogged her girlhood days.

AN INCONSIDERATE WIFE

The other day a very beautiful young woman, married about a year, was calling on me. She was so lovely, so eager and animated and gay, that anyone seeing her might naturally have thought that her husband was a lucky man. She had been with me about half an hour when the husband came in. He was tired, glad to relax for a minute, and happy to find his lovely wife awaiting him.

As he stooped to kiss her she said patiently, "Oh, please Larry!" in the tone of a martyr. When he asked me if she didn't look well she glanced quickly about the group and murmured with a little scornful snigger of cheap laughter, "Oh, good gracious, aren't we provincial! A man in love with his wife."

In the next fifteen minutes she made fun of him; sneered at him; sided against him in the only opinion he expressed; spoke contemptuously of the "sort of plays Larry and his mother think are beautiful," and told a little story highly amusing to everyone but Larry, of how he had met the vice-president of his company at the train, and mistaken the valet for the man, and floundered through a series of embarrassing blunders before the matter was straightened out.

"So Mr. Roy Barrows got the promotion!" she finished, with another school-girl snigger. "And Minna Barrows buys herself a mink coat! While poor little me, I take a good look in the fur-shop window and have to be satisfied with that!"

SCHOOLS FOR MARRIAGE

Everyone present, of course, was aware that she did not love Larry. Everyone, that is, except Larry, who gave a pitiful exhibition of a man determined to persist in his illusion that this was funny, and cute, and quite what he had to expect from a pretty little wife.

Someday I hope we'll have training schools for the delicate manipulation of marriage. I mean it seriously. I mean that if our boys and girls don't learn that tenderness and consideration and a real resolution to weld their lives and interests, their amusements and plans and hopes together; if they don't make these a part of their marriages, then theirs will not be real marriages, and will be doomed to failure.

Any wife, who wants to be a success, ought to study her husband's nature as she would a new language. She ought to learn the signs of nervous fatigue, of business anxiety, and meet them with additional gentleness and patience. She ought to be taught that her devoted old group of school or office friends ought not to be chattering all over the place when he gets home late in the afternoon, and that many a man who has been working hard hates to find other men, who don't work at all, idling about with cocktail glasses at half-past five in his house. There should be rules for telephone conservations that interrupt the dinner hour of the newly-weds; forty minutes ought perhaps to be the limit of a talk between Angela and her dear girl-friend Charlotte, who calls up so faithfully every night.

As for the rudeness at card parties and dinner parties that forms so distressing a feature of early married life, let the luckier partner remember that it springs from an unexpressed and often unrecognized jealousy. Tom knows that Angela is a quicker and more amusing conversationalist than he is, and he must be rude to be noticed at all. Angela's job then is to feature him, to guide him into a more secure social attitude, to avoid the occasions that embarrass and shame him.

THE MEANING OF LOVE

There is nothing in marriage so important, so pleasant, so apparently harmless that is not well sacrificed for the preservation of love. And love here means confidence and companionship and happiness; it means that dream that Angela and Tom dreamed when they were first engaged.

They dreamed of a man and woman always together, admired enough and happy enough when they were in company, but saving their rarest hours for their hours alone. Alone in a little brown house with the rain falling and a fire crackling and books to read. Alone on country walks when April is reluctantly giving place to May, and the willows are green, and the frogs piping. Alone for a thousand little meals; ham and eggs for breakfast in wayside restaurants; sandwiches and a thermos bottle on the top of a mountain; cold chicken and salad in the kitchen Sunday nights. Alone while they buy new plates and new shoes, and presently look at cribs and high-chairs; alone in the great joys of life, and comforting each other in the bitter inescapable loneliness of its sorrows.

Every man likes to have his wife to himself. Every woman loves to feel that she comes first with her husband. And if they feel it in early married years, they feel it more and more as time goes by; they feel a deeper need of one another; they feel a quickened envy of the women who have made a success of it, and who go on toward eventide leaning on the same old faithful arm.

But a happy marriage is no accident. It is built like a coral island of a thousand million tiny elements that seem ridiculously unimportant when taken separately, but that, united, form an enduring rock.

SACRIFICE IS REWARDED

A great many young women, who are encountering today the doubts and chills that sometimes blow cold upon the bark of matrimony, and yet who long in their hearts to have the years knit the tie closer and closer, would find it profitable to play a part for a little while with all the ardor that parts are played in Hollywood and on Broadway.

To always put the happiness of another person first; to be extraordinarily sweet to Tom's mother; to be always at home welcoming and sympathetic at night; to talk of his interests rather than her own; to be silent in the occasional difference of opinion or under the occasional snub or hurt; to give up this or that engagement cheerfully and always, always to show by acts and words that the flame of true married love is burning brightly and steadily despite all the ups and downs may be indeed to lose her life for a little while.

But there is a promise about that. "Whosoever will lose his life . . . shall find it." To lose your own selfishness and smallness for the sake of peace and love is to gain a great reward indeed. A reward on terms that are far too high for any earthly comparison.

What To Do

By Phyllis Belmont

When any one gives me a compliment about my appearance or my clothes, what should I say? What is the correct way to introduce a boy friend to my mother and father?

JULIA.

Answer—Say anything natural and sincere—like, "Thank you, I'm glad you like my dress," or whatever the compliment applies to, or just "Thank you." If it is some one you know very well you might say, "Thanks—a compliment from you is appreciated." But whatever comment you make never say, "Oh, I never liked this dress"—or what have you. A remark like this indicates that you don't appreciate the compliment or value the person's opinion.

Since we always present a man to a woman you would introduce your friend to your mother, saying, "Mother, this is Jack Bingham." You need not give your mother's name unless her last name is different from yours, as it would be if you were married. In introducing your boy friend to your father say, "Dad, this is Jack Bingham." You see, a young man is always presented to the older man.

HYPNOTISM IS NOT A FAKE SCIENCE

Many people still class hypnotism with such fake sciences as astrology, fortune-telling, palm-reading and the like; but the truth is that hypnotism is now established as a definite scientific fact. It is used in many universities for experiments and is being used by psychiatrists for curing many kinds of fears and complexes. Medical men have used it some in place of anesthetics for operations and for childbirth. It has graduated out of the sideshow to the scientific laboratories, and offers many possible uses when employed by trained men.

"A BOOK OF VERSES UNDERNEATH THE BOUGH, A JUG OF WINE, A LOAF OF BREAD—AND THOU

World-Famous Poem

All the beauty and wisdom, joy and sadness of life are summed up in the immortal Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

No wonder countless generations have quoted the Persian poet's matchless words:

"Ah, my Beloved, fill the Cup that clears
Today of past Regrets and future Fears.
Tomorrow?—Why, Tomorrow I may be . . ."

And in reckless mood, who hasn't felt the force of the famous couplet:

"Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!"

Or mourn with those lovers of centuries ago:

"Yet Ah, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!
That Youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!"

New Scheme of Nursing Education Envisioned by Surgeon in Speech

FACILITIES TO AID RESEARCH NEED IS SEEN

Profession Must Have As Firm Base As Medicine, Nurses Told

HALIFAX, July 9.—A new scheme of nursing education in which greater facilities for research would be provided, was envisioned by Dr. H. Benge Atlee, Halifax surgeon, in an address before the Canadian Nurses' Association convention.

The medical profession was given facilities for research so there was no reason why the same should not be provided for nurses, he said.

"The nursing school of the future will have to be part of a university and will have to be as definite a faculty within that university as medicine or law.

"If you are to become the coadjutors, rather than the servants of my profession, you will have to undergo an educational discipline which, however it differs in kind, will not differ in quality, and will be as firmly based on science."

Dr. Atlee suggested the possibility of the nursing profession taking over the whole field of obstretrics when adequately educated and trained. "In those countries where the lowest maternal mortality rates attend childbirth, the vast majority of labors are conducted by nurse midwives. Some very outstanding obstetricians in Europe believe that their low death rates are due to this fact."

Art In Saskatchewan

By Nellie McClung

(Copyright Reserved)

MUCH has been written about the buoyant spirits of the people of Saskatchewan and the gallant way they have borne their losses. But the half has never been told.

I attended a reception in March, in a part of Saskatchewan that has not had a crop for seven years. I thought it was a brave thing for them to do, for seven years must have worn them down well past the line of decency in dress. That is what I thought, in my ignorance.

FIRST SURPRISE

I got my first surprise when I was in the hall. A tall vase of chrysanthemums greeted me. I touched them furtively. Yes, they were real. So were all the other flowers in the house. Home grown and beautiful! They even had a corsage bouquet for me, a pelargonium, with pink oxalis, tied with silver ribbon. I spoke of this, trying to let them know how highly they had honored me, in cutting their precious flowers. They assured me the flowers had done well this year, and every one had them.

I got my next surprise when I looked about me. The guests were dressed not only well, but fashionably. They even had the queer little hats, resembling wind-mills, coffee-grinders, skimmers, and tea-cosies, just exactly the sort of hats I had seen the week before in Toronto. I wondered where they had come from. Had they all rich relatives who sent these things to them? Rich relatives usually send last year's garments I believe. But these dresses were certainly all 1938 models (numbers is the word now). I knew they were enjoying my bewilderment, and now I know.

ART OF LIVING

Saskatchewan has a university, and in that university there is a professor of economics. And she and her assistants have travelled every gravelled highway or dirt road in Saskatchewan, giving the women of the province instruction in the finest art of all, the art of living. And that really means the art of making the best of their environment. They have taught them to design and make their own clothes. By clothes I mean not merely covering, but adornment.

In the days before the drought, when money was plentiful, the farm women sent to the mail order houses for their dresses. I have several old photographs of conventions I have attended, where the dresses were not distinctive. Two or three might be identical. I was in a series once myself. But you will not see any duplicates now.

Out of the desert has come a gift, the gift of originality.

I wrote once, last year, of the conversations I heard in a Saskatchewan city when the wind, laden with dust, was raging through the streets. I said the people made no comment on the dust, but talked of poetry and music. This was in Regina.

PLEASANT WORLD

A newspaper woman at the coast disagreed with me, rather violently. I think she said I was "havering," or words to that effect. She thought it could not be that people could rise above their environment, and see a pleasant world beyond the dust. There was nothing to do but take it, because, as Elbert Hubbard said, you cannot tell people anything unless they already know it.

But I hope she heard Sir Hugh Roberton's farewell address, just before he sailed for England, in which he gave his highest measure of praise to a children's chorus in Saskatchewan. Such artistry, he said, he had not heard in Canada, as when the Regina children sang of waterfalls they had never seen.

"Wake up, Vancouver," he said. "Wake up Victoria! You have but to lift your eyes to behold magic, but can it be that the eye of flesh can confuse the eye of the soul?"

Travelling across the country I saw here and there small bodies of water, looking like lakes where no lakes had been before. They were walled up on one or more sides, and were really lakes of artificial make, water-stops. Instead of letting the waten run away in the spring, it was held there by those walls.

ON WAY BACK

All over the prairie provinces may be seen those projects for conserving the rainfall, and increasing the water surfaces from which the clouds receive their moisture. Cattle are feeding on abundant meadows, some of the fields of grain are dimpling in the breeze, the ploughed fields are richly brown with an undertone of purple. I see that young trees have been planted to take the place of those that died in the drought. Saskatchewan is on its way back to prosperity.

In Saskatoon I was taken to see an exhibition of pictures by a young Viennese, named Steiger, which I wish could be seen by everyone. Mr. Steiger began his life in Canada by working for $25 a month. He wrote show cards for a store, and did some clerking. Now he is making pictures of people, and he has chosen the people around him.

He had just finished one of a man who sometimes comes to Saskatoon in his wanderings. He is a long-haired rover, with haunting blue eyes, filled with the old question of why do we suffer? With a pack on his back and his hands resting on a stick, his face, arresting and questioning, looked at us. The hands, sunburnt to a mahogany shade, blue veined and somehow beautiful, fascinated me. Indeed, the whole display is a soul-warming experience.

"DROUGHT"

His picture, called "Drought," has been reproduced in many Canadian papers. It shows a young man, sunburnt, weather-beaten, his eyes burning with disappointment, and inflamed by the dust. Yet there is strength and power in his face. He has not yet admitted defeat.

Mr. Steiger is an interpreter of the country, as truly as if he had written a novel.

GREAT BOOKS IN BRIEF

By ELIZABETH COATES JAMES

ANNA KARENINA

By COUNT LEO TOLSTOY

(The thirteenth novel in the list of "The Fifteen Finest Novels" as selected by Dr. William Lyon Phelps.)

Tolstoy described Anna as small of stature with full figure, her brunet coloring animated by unusual vigor of spirit. In the beginning of the novel she loved life, later when ostracism had chilled this love, life became hateful to her.

In her youth Anna Karenina had been married by family arrangement to Alexey Alexandrovitch, twenty years her senior, a man deeply involved in affairs of government, which he felt to be the aim of existence. There was no marital love, but vast wealth and cultured harmony, stimulated by court and government life. Anna's vital temperament was far beyond the reach of her husband. She found happiness with her son, Seryozha, whom she loved devotedly.

As the story opens, Anna's brother wired her to come at once to Moscow, for his wife was planning to leave him. Darya, his wife, at the age of 34, had borne seven children, and when Anna arrived she was in a fury at her Stephen's infidelity of which she had just learned. Anna was peace maker.

At the railroad station and again socially, Anna met Count Alexey Vronsky. His attentions to her were in poor form, for all society knew that he had been paying court to Kitty Setcherbatshy, Darya's sister. Without adequate explanation, Anna returned to St. Petersburg the day after the ball. When the homeward journey was half over, she met Vronsky; he had followed her.

MEETS EVERYWHERE

Back in court circles, Anna met Vronsky everywhere. It was love. Anna recognized her duty to her husband and child, yet she was unable to stop her love for Vronsky. He was the only man that she had ever loved.

When their relationship reached the place where Anna considered Vronsky her husband, she broke the rule of the aristocracy, which held affairs to be entirely permissible if all parties kept up appearances of conventional life, and if the affair was ignored. Anna told her husband the truth. He had never had an intense emotion of any kind, therefore this conduct in his wife appeared not only immoral but unnatural, senseless.

Alexandrovitch offered a divorce to his wife with the stipulation that his son would remain with him. Anna refused to give up her son, and continued to live in the house of Alexandrovitch, so that she could be with her son. This arrangement was intolerable for all. A daughter was born to Anna and Vronsky. Anna's illness went into a fever so severe that the doctor gave up hope for her life. In the days of her delirium her only cry was for the forgiveness of Alexandrovitch. Softened, he forgave her and tried to comfort Vronsky in his despair. Vronsky saw the depth of Anna's sorrow and tried to kill himself.

WISHED TO LEAVE

Months later, when she was recovered in health, Anna wished to leave Russia. She and Vronsky lived abroad, with their daughter and a retinue of servants. But Anna was inconsolable at the loss of her son, she could not love her daughter as she loved her son, and Vronsky resented her indifference to his daughter. Longing to see Seryozha, Anna pleaded that they return to St. Petersburg.

Again in their old circle of friends, Vronsky was received but Anna was not. Only two women dared come to see her. The men called but when their wives learned of it, there was trouble. The irony of it irritated, the disloyalty of friends hurt, the strain grew taut. Openly cut at the opera, and entirely excluded from companionship, Anna fell into a state of hysteria.

Only once was she successful in seeing her son. The father had told Seryozha that his mother was dead. The child instinctively disbelieved it. On his birthday, Anna brought gifts, and by bribing the servants, she found her son.

WERE IN ECSTACY

Mother and son were in ecstacy, neither could say anything. They wept and kissed each other madly, knowing this had to suffice for a long time. The servants fearfully warned Anna that Alexey was coming. She fled, forgetting to leave the birthday gifts. For days afterward the child was ill with longing for his mother.

Wretchedness undermined Anna, until jealousy of Vronsky was added to remorse. Periodic insanity caused her to become violent. After a quarrel with Vronsky she ran away from home and threw herself under a moving train. Vronsky was in complete prostration. He had loved her and had suffered that he could not control circumstances and bring her happiness. He gave his life for the Servians against the Turks.

IN CULT POWER

Alexey Alexandrovitch grew fanatical, falling into the power of a cult that taught clairvoyance by trance. Nothing more is said of Seryozha.

This novel tells the story of seven people, two unhappy married couples, and one happy man and wife. By contrast Tolstoy evaluates the results of how people meet situations. He deals with a multitude of sins and vices, interpretating their reaction on the human mind. The result is a classic.

In 946 pages, usually printed in two volumes, Tolstoy has ample space to depict many people and much of life. There are court officials, relatives, army officers and family servants, enlivening the story and revealing a panorama of Russian life in the time of the Tsar. The period is just prior to the Russo-Turkish war, at the time when European manners and scientific inventions were filtering into the Russian pattern, a pattern centuries old and decidedly oriental. Tolstoy spent four years writing the book.

FARM RELIEF PLAN CHARGED BEING RACKET

CALGARY, July 9.—Three of the five Calgary unemployed men who vainly sought the relief commission in Saskatchewan appeared before it Friday.

They denied rumors that their Saskatchewan trip had political significance, asked that the soup kitchen be abolished, said farmers were making a racket of the farm relief scheme, and "were as fine a delegation as we've had," according to a statement issued by A. V. Bourcier, M.L.A. for Lac Ste. Anne, commission chairman.

The meetings are closed to the press.

The men, appearing as a special delegation of the single men's unemployed union, were A. Cohen, F. Whatmough and J. Hynman. They said the two other men had left town, one perhaps for England.

Calgary Rodeo Draws Record Cowboy Entry

CALGARY, July 9.—Calgary stampede entry records were shattered Friday when J. M. Dillon, Arena director, announced 636 cowboys from Canada and the United States had entered the championship contests.

"And more are expected," said Mr. Dillon. The entry list closed at midnight last night. The previous record was 600.

The Calary Stampede and Exhibition opens Monday.

LOANS MADE ON HOUSING FAIL IN ALBERTA'S ZONE

OTTAWA, July 9.—Loans made under the Dominion housing act reached a new high in June, the department of finance announced today. Providing housing for 590 families, the loans amounted to $2,096,713, compared with $913,127 loaned to 227 families in June last year.

Since the fall of 1935 $19,400,000 had been loaned to 4,829 families under the act, the Dominion government participating to the extent of 25 per cent and the banks and lending organizations loaning the rest. The average loan was $4,019.

The number of loans made in each province in June with the amount follow: Ontario 1,308, $9,181,991; British Columbia 540, $2,506,893; Quebec 608, $3,239,315; Nova Scotia 358, $1,572,983; New Brunswick 84, $378,967; Manitoba 75, $504,734; Prince Edward Island 10, $54,034; Saskatchewan 2, $8,200; Alberta, none.

Meanest Thief In Calgary Sentenced

CALGARY, July 9.—Described as Calgary's meanest thief, Robert Fletcher, 32, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment by Magistrate D. C. Sinclair Friday. He was found guilty of stealing $25 from the Junior Red Cross hospital.

"Stealing money from crippled children is one of the most despicable and contemptible things I have ever had brought to my notice," the magistrate told Fletcher.

City Church Activities

MISSIONARIES CONTINUE WORK

TORONTO, July 9—After a year of war in China several hundred Canadian missionaries continue to perform their duty despite hazards and difficulties almost unbelievable. The largest group of Canadian missionary representatives of the United Church of Canada are laboring in West China. There are at least 32 in North China.

They are busier than ever before because of the great number of refugees in that area. It is reported that many of the 30,000,000 people forced to flee from their homes in East and North China have sought refuge and help in Central and West China. In one United Church mission compound alone there were recently and probably still are about 5,000 refugees.

CUT OFF

The Canadian missionaries working in Czechuan Province are now cut off from Shanghai and the China coast, and can only reach the outside world by airplane or by a long motor trip through Yunnan and Indo-China or sometimes through Hankow to Canton and Hongkong.

Canadian missionaries in the war zone are daily risking their lives and remaining on duty. Close to the front lines are United church missionaries in Honan. They have recently had to build dugouts in cellars as protection against Japanese bombs. One group spent three days and nights in the dug-out when bombs rained in the area. Then, when the Japanese occupied the city, they came out and resumed their normal life, helping the poor.

Eight Canadian missionaries at Hwaiking in Honan have had no mail since the end of February. Messengers carrying mail have been known to be punished.

One of the most active Canadians in the war area is Dr. Robert B. McClure, of Toronto, a member of the United church mission at Hwaiking, but loaned to the International Red Cross as field director for the northern front.

Dr. McClure is responsible for organization of medical relief and refugee work over a tremendous area in Honan, Shansi and Anhwei, and has been forced to travel hundreds of miles by bicycle through difficult territory to enlist the services of Catholic and Protestant missionaries in the common cause of humanity.

While other United Church of Canada missionaries are returning to the war area from furlough in Canada in the summer and early fall, the United church is seeking to raise funds to aid in the relief of Chinese refugees and war sufferers. Money should be sent to the church treasurer, Rev. Dr. Robert Laird, in Toronto.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science churches next Sunday, the subject of the lesson-sermon will be "Sacrament." One of the Scriptural quotations in the lesson-sermon is I Corinthians 12:13, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy is: "Baptism. Purification by Spirit; submergence in Spirit," (p. 581).

INDUCTION TAKES PLACE AT CENTRAL

Rev. Finnis Marsh was on Friday inducted into the charge of Central United church by representatives of the Edmonton Presbytery.

The service was in charge of Rev. E. T. Scragg, of Wesley United church, assisted by Rev. R. Simons of Fort Saskatchewan and Prof. Clyo Jackson of St. Stephens College.

Rev. Simons addressed the congregation, pointing out some desirable attributes which a congregation should cultivate, as a body and as individuals, toward their minister, so that through the fullest measure of understanding and co-operation he could do his best work and the church render its greatest service.

Prof. Jackson in addressing the minister spoke of his great task as leader, confident and true friend of the people in all his ministrations, and of his great opportunity for Christian leadership, at all times giving direction and guidance in the higher and nobler things that would integrate the lives of all.

The Induction ceremony was discharged by Rev. E. T. Scragg, chairman of the Induction Committee of Presbytery.

Rev. Marsh pronounced the benediction.

At close of the service refreshments were served by the ladies and a happy social hour spent.

RELIGION MEET NEXT AUGUST

The Alberta School of Religion will meet at camp "Fairweather" two miles west of Bowness from August 9-19.

Outstanding among the visiting lecturers will be Dr. Paul A. Schilpp professor of philosophy of North Western University, Evanston, Ill., who will give a series of ten addressse on "A Christian Ethic for Today". Many prominent preachers will take part in the programme.

"Fairweather" camp is situated in one of the most beautiful and restful spots in the Bow Valley. It is secluded and yet only twenty minutes drive from the city of Calgary.

You may secure accommodation in cabin or tent. Your board, registration to the school and all the privileges of this eleven day camp for only ten dollars. You may bring your family. Special rates on application. You need send no money, but if you desire a place in this Fellowship, get your name in at once.

Rev. H. M. Herricks, of De Winton, Alberta, is president.

Missionary Dies

TORONTO, July 9.—Rev. Murdoch Mackenzie, 80, who for 47 years was a missionary of the Presbyterian church in Canada and the United Church of Canada in Honan, China, died last night at his home here.

Cabbages Early

WELLAND, Ont., July 9—Cabbage harvesting is in full swing along the southern part of Essex County and farmers are making rich profits with cabbage selling at $1.50 a case. Frost damage has reduced the strawberry crop.

BAPTIST UNITY ON PRAIRIES URGED AT MEET

VANCOUVER, July 9—Rev. Elbert Paul of Vancouver last night warned the forty-second annual conference of Baptist churches in British Columbia that the "Baptist denomination will become nothing but a bubble in the Pacific ocean" unless the conference fulfills terms of the union with three prairie provinces.

Speaking on the western union of Baptist churches, ratified by the convention last year but not yet fully in effect, Rev. Paul asked delegates to sink their differences and the "insularity that characterizes Baptists." He said union would bring great benefits and might result in the salvation of the church in British Columbia.

The provincial conference took no action on the question. Further debate is expected when the Baptist union of Western Canada meets here next week.

Pope To Greet Hungarians On Visit To Italy

ROME, July 9—Premier Bella Imredy and Foreign Minister Koloman Kanya of Hungary will come to Italy July 18 for a four-day official visit, it was announced last night. Pope Pius XI will receive the Hungarian premier July 20. Their Italian journey will precede their visit to Berlin August 21 with Regent Nicholas Horthy.

LONDON, July 9.—Commenting on a recent suicide, Deputy Coroner C. G. Moran said if he had an opportunity of having tea and a chat with the woman she would not have taken her life.

Man Steals Mountie's Uniform To Aid Fraud

REGINA, July 9—Theft of an R.C.M.P. dress uniform at Mounted Police barracks here and the subsequent cashing of worthless cheques for $200 by a man dressed in the uniform Thursday was reported by R. C. M. P. and city police today.

With a companion the man went to the home of a constable at the barracks yesterday, telling the constable's wife that her husband had received sudden orders to go on parade and had asked him to deliver his uniform.

The woman turned over to the men her husband's revolver, Stetson hat, red jacket, yellow-striped trousers and black riding boots.

An hour or so later one of the men, dressed in the uniform, walked into a downtown store and cashed a worthless cheque for $50 and proceeded to a north-side store, where he cashed another worthless cheque for $150.

Edmonton Standing on Threshold of Opportunities

Mining Properties Now Reach Stage Near Production

New General Manager of Bear Exploration and Radium Sees City in Same Position As Toronto 20 Years Ago

Greatly increased activity noticed this year in the Yellowknife area is not the result of a "boom" but of a carefully planned intensive prospecting campaign, according to C. Hershman, veteran mining engineer and recently appointed general manager of Bear Exploration and Radium, when interviewed by The Bulletin Friday.

Mr Hershman who has watched gold mining development in Canada for the past 27 years has seen and been personally connected with every major gold strike in Canada and Alaska during the past quarter century.

He announced Friday that he will fly into the Yellowknife area in a Mackenzie Air Service plane on Monday to begin an extensive diamond drill testing campaign on the B.E.A.R. claims in the Yellowknife and Gordon Lake areas.

FACES OPPORTUNITIES

Returning to the city Thursday evening after a preliminary survey of properties in the Yellowknife area, Mr. Hershman stated that he believes that Edmonton is now faced with opportunities similar to those that Toronto took advantage of 20 years ago, when the Porcupine, Kirkland Lake and Cobalt mining areas were opened up.

Work already in progress in the Yellowknife and Gordon Lake areas—such as the Negus, the Consolidated Mining and Smelting company's and the Mining Corporation of Canada's mines—indicated that there are possibilities of the development of a series of mines of good average tonnage.

"What the country needs now is some real work to bring some of these potential mines into production. In most places the work which has been done so far has been only hen-scratching. The day of individual effort and private prospecting is over. The country has been discovered and must now be brought into production," explained the engineer whose first experiences were with the now famous McIntyre mine in Ontario.

ESTABLISH OFFICES

"Development work is already beginning and eastern mining men are looking more and more to this interesting new field in the north," he said. "I would not be surprised to see many of these Toronto and eastern mining companies which have interests in the Yellowknife and Goldfields areas and most of the worthwhile properties are owned by eastern companies establish branch offices in Edmonton in order

Canadian Corps Holds Week-End Parley At Lake

Co-ordination of Canadian Corps Association work under a provincial advisory council will be discussed at the association convention to be held at Sylvan Lake over the week-end.

Edmonton delegates will be Capt. H. A. Dyde, M.C., president of the Lt.-Col. W. L. Oliver, M.C., and Lt.-Edmonton wing of the association: Col. F. A. Stewart-Dunn.

Alberta points represented at the parley are this city, Sylvan Lake, Camrose, Drumheller, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Calgary.

It is likely that the convention will elect a provincial executive and will draft a constitution.

Representations and suggestions to be made to the Dominion convention of the Corps Association at Toronto at the end of this month also will be discussed.

Formation of an Alberta Association will be one of the first among the provinces of the Dominion, only Ontario and British Columbia being organized up until now.

Passenger Agent Retiring in City After Long Term

J. F. ("Joe") Philp, city passenger and ticket agent for the Canadian National Railways since May, 1910, and an employee who has seen more years of service in the passenger department than anyone else in all Canada, ended 53 years continuous connection with the company on his retirement Saturday.

Mr. Philp will be 65 years of age Sunday, the retiring age. He was at the office Saturday, working away till the last moment of his active service at problems he has mastered times without number in his more than half century of railway activity.

One of the best known and most popular railway officials in Edmonton, Mr. Philp received many tributes from his railway colleagues.

W. C. Owens, general superintendent for the C. N. R. in Alberta lauded the zeal and efficiency which have marked Mr. Philp's performance of duty during his long period of service.

Similar eulogies were voiced by Joseph Madill, district passenger agent, who has been associated with Mr. Philp since the co-ordination of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern in August, 1920.

"I think that Mr. Philp has set up a mark of achievement that will be an abiding tradition for his work always was thorough and marked by a devotion to duty that knew no slackening.

BEST WISHES

"It was a pleasure to work so many years with him and I know all members of the ticket office join with me in extending to him best wishes for many happy years in retirement". Mr. Madill concluded.

Succeeding Mr. Philp as city passenger and ticket agent is A. R. MacDougall, who has been travelling passenger agent, working out of Edmonton, for the past 15 years.

F. N. McKenzie, of Vancouver, will replace Mr. MacDougall as travelling passenger agent. Both appointments become effective Monday.

Born in Port Hope, Ontario on July 10 sixty-five years ago Mr Philp has had an active railway career which brought him from his original post as office boy to his present responsible duties.

WAS OFFICE BOY

Following a five year period, dating from 1885 as office boy and apprentice in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway at Port Hope, he was moved to various points on the system as clerk, cashier, and other capacities. In 1896 he went to Montreal and remained there until 1907, transferring west in that year and joining the Grand Trunk Pacific later.

He came to Edmonton in May, 1910, to open the downtown city ticket office for what was then the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The premises were in the space now occupied by the Merrick Drug Store, next to the present site of the C. N. R. city office.

In August 1920 when the Grand Trunk Pacific was merged with the Canadian National Railways, the G T P office was closed and Mr Philp was transferred to the office next door as the city ticket agent.

TRAIN AGENT

Prior to coming to Edmonton he was with the G. T. P. in the capacity of travelling train agent, accompanying the mixed train service between Wainwright and Edmonton.

His duties during this period were varied, as well as exacting, he indicated [illegible] in railroading made since those early days.

While railways still were in the construction period, he said, train agents were on all mixed train services where both freight and

VETERAN PILOT REPORTS FINER FUEL FOR CARS

Capt. "Pat" Reid To Inspect Oil Storage Stations In North

Refinements in gasoline and motor fuels required by modern aircraft engines has resulted in the development of finer fuels for automobiles, and particularly in the development of hi-octane, or "anti-knock" fuels, Captain T. M. "Pat" Reid, wartime pilot and now head of Imperial Oil Aviation department, reported in Edmonton at the week-end.

Captain Reid is bound for the northern mining fields to inspect oil storage stations that the company is installing in order to meet the increased demand for airplane motor fuel at northern points.

NO STRANGER

Although his headquarters are now in Toronto, the Captain is no stranger in Edmonton, as he flew out of here with Matt Berry, W. R. "Wop" May, and others, when he was associated with Northern Aerial Minerals Exploration in the years between 1928 and 1932.

Conditions in the north, where aircraft fuels are stored for periods of time as long as four years, have necessitated the development of stable and first class gasolines which would not deposit gum or other harmful substances, he said. And the cold winters have made it necessary to develop fuels which will vaporize at exceedingly low temperatures and which will still permit high compression.

HIGH COMPRESSION

As a result of research work in producing fuels to meet these exacting conditions the Imperial Oil Company have been able to produce finer motor car fuels also, permitting the development of high compression engines, he stated.

The Inquiring Reporter

Toronto is in the throes of another of its periodic crises. A service club speaker declared that married women should not work, and now the argument rages merrily in that city.

"What side would you take in this controversy?" The Bulletin Inquiring Reporter asked. Here are the replies.

JEAN CASE, stenographer: I am perfectly impartial on this subject, because at the moment I am not married nor working. But if I continue worrying about that question, I may not be working at all soon. I suppose it all depends on the circumstances, whether a married woman should work or not.

T. G. GRIFFIN, secretary, Canadian Legion: That speaker could get away with what he said in Toronto because he was addressing a men's luncheon. He might not have been so lucky had he been speaking to women, most of whom have very definite opinions on this subject.

JIM NEWTON, salesman: There is no moral objection to women working after their marriage, there is simply an economic one. Many of these women do not really have to work and so they clutter up an already [illegible] ed market. Of course, there is no objection to a married woman working if her husband can't find employment.

Garden Contest Is Sponsored By Horticulturists

Tuesday will be the closing day for entries in this year's annual vacant lot and home garden competitions sponsored by the Edmonton Horticultural Society, it was announced Saturday. Entries may be made at the society's offices in the Civic Block.

Special prizes will be awarded in the following classes: potato plot, best home garden, public or industrial grounds beautification, lawn competition and [illegible] garden [illegible]. Special competitions are being held this year for a decorative [illegible].

[illegible] competition close July 15.

BIG BALLOONS FEATURE OF FAIR PARADE

Manager Douglas Grout Reports 53 Floats Entered—15 Bands

Huge gas-filled Broadway balloons will be the outstanding features of the Edmonton Exhibition Association's diamond jubilee parade which will wind its way through downtown streets July 19, second day of fair-week, July 18 to 23.

Parade Manager Ald. Douglas Grout reported Saturday Briggs Broadway Balloons hit a new high in parade entertainment. Always one of the highlights of celebrations in the big American cities, these mammoth bags are being brought to Edmonton for the first time.

Anchored to 17 trucks, the monster balloons will float above the crowd on parade day. For the entertainment of children, they have been constructed in the form of animals and comic strip characters.

Manager Grout stated that already 53 floats had been entered for the summer fair parade, and he expects this total will be increased considerably when all entries are in. Closing time for entries is Monday night, July 18—the night before the parade.

Fifteen bands containing 500 musicians will also be part of the parade.

Prizes for the children's section in the parade total $60 in cash. Prizes in this class will be awarded for boys' and girls' best-decorated bicycles, boys' best home-made float; best boy and girl novelty on horseback, best boy and girl bride and groom; boys' and girls' fancy costumes.

The parade will move off from the corner of 110 street and Jasper avenue at 9 a.m. Tuesday, July 19. Full information may be obtained by phoning 21181.

PLOUGH PRIZES PRESENTED AT SOCIETY MEET

Agricultural Group Makes Awards Following South Side Contest

Presentation of trophies won at the recent tenth annual ploughing contest sponsored by the South Edmonton and District Agricultural Society, was the main feature at the annual meeting, banquet and dance held in the Acacia hall, South Edmonton, on Friday evening.

Mr. Clyde C. [illegible] presented the [illegible] ploughmen with the trophies which were donated by local firms.

GET TROPHIES

R. Hopper received the Robert [illegible] challenge trophy for the walking plough class while Len Job, grand champion for the fourth time, carried home the silver challenge cup from the Bank of Montreal.

An old English, engraved silver tray, donated by the Bank of Commerce, South Side branch, was the prize won by Alfred Ellett, of Sandy Lake, in the sulky plough class.

In the class provided for contestants who have never won a championship, T. W. Rowswell, of North Edmonton, was made the recipient of a silver medal from the Royal Bank.

In the junior division, for boys under 18 years, L. Kadatz took first place, with L. Henschell and A. Werner placing second and third.

ANOTHER CUP

Grand champion Len Job, further added to his collection of prizes and trophies the Imperial Bank's silver cup for the best crown and a bronze medal for the best finish.

Dinner, which was prepared by the Ladies' Aid Society of West Salisbury was followed by a dance.

NOMINATIONS

Nominations for the directorate, which will be elected next Friday evening at a meeting of the society in the South Side branch of the Bank of Commerce building, include: Alfred Ellett, George Briggs, Len Job, James Stannard, Frank Smeltzer, Wilbur Ottewell, Lyle Alcock, Harry Andrews, Reinhard Henschell, William Graunke, Emil Henschell, Andrew Adamson, Dale Walker, Herman Minchau, Bill Turnbull, R. C. Neale, R. Hopper, James Villetard, Alexander Law, Jack Leslie, Art McEachern, Stewart Hawkins, William Davis and Robert Briggs.

Retiring directors will continue to act in an advisory capacity on an honorary board.

Gleaned From Today's News

Pilot Rudy Heuss of Canadian Airways is expected to arrive in the city about 1.30 p.m. with six passengers from the north.

J. H. Tremblay, M.L.A. for Grouard, is planning to leave on Monday for a 10-day visit to his constituency.

Mackenzie Air Service reported that Gil McLaren is expected to arrive at Cooking Lake late Saturday afternoon with passengers and mail from Yellowknife and Goldfields.

Annual picnic for Edmontonians in Vancouver will be held Wednesday, July 20, at Stanley Park and all citizens of Edmonton who happen to be in the coast city that day are invited to attend.

The management and health committee of the Edmonton Public School Board will meet in the Board room at the Civic block on Tuesday, July 12, at 8 o'clock, just prior to the regular Board meeting.

Here for a four-day visit to consult with local officials of the company, W. G. McIntosh, assistant superintendent of agencies for the Sun Life Assurance Company, arrived in Edmonton Saturday. He said his business was purely of a private nature.

All Edmonton militiamen who have been attending the manoeuvres at Sarcee Camp, near Calgary, will return to the city Saturday evening. They will arrive at the Canadian Pacific Railway's depot on a special train due to arrive at 9:15 p.m.

Believed to be the work of juveniles, more than $100 worth of groceries, candy and tobacco was stolen from Speers Confectionery store located at the foot of McDougall hill sometime Friday night, police reported Thursday. The thieves drilled holes in the back wall of the store and then sawed out a hole with a keyhole saw.

Police were investigating a report received Friday afternoon from a citizen who refused to give his name that [illegible] canvassers [illegible] collect money [illegible].

Police Court

A 17-year-old Edmonton youth was sentenced to serve three years with hard labor in Prince Albert penitentiary when he appeared before Magistrate A. H. Gibson in juvenile police court Saturday.

The boy had been convicted on four charges of shopbreaking, two of house breaking and two of theft of autos. He was one of a gang of juveniles who embarked on a career of crime earlier this year. Two others are already serving five and three year terms in Prince Albert.

ALBERTA WILL CHECK FIRMS FROM OUTSIDE

Rigid Examination To Be Made On License Regulations

Rigid check-up of companies outside Alberta carrying on business in this province without being registered under the Companies Act, or without having their representatives or agents properly licensed under The Licencing of Trades and Businesses Act, will be commenced in the near future according to Hon. Ernest C. Manning. Officials will be instructed to take proceedings in cases where the law has not been complied with.

"It has come to the attention of the government that certain outside companies are carrying on business in Alberta without being registered under the Companies Act or their representatives or agents properly licensed under the Licensing of Trades and Businesses Act," said the minister.

"Agents or representatives whose principals are not limited companies within the meaning of the Companies Act are required to take out a yearly license under The Licensing of Trades and Businesses Act before soliciting business in the province."

According To Culbertson

BY ELY CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The time and place: A rainy afternoon at the club. The retired colonel is attacking, his objective a small slam. His flanks harried by two apparently unconquerable queens, he is calling up all the experience acquired in bridge battles to find a way to dislodge one of them. Suddenly inspiration comes. The present battle lines originally were as follows:

"East, dealer

"Both sides vulnerable

NORTH
♠A K 2
♥J 9 5

WEST
♠Q 7 5 4
♦9 7 4

EAST
♠None
♥A K Q 10 8 7 6 2
♦Q J 10

SOUTH
♠J 10 9 8 6 3
♥None
♦A K 2
♣A J 10 7

"East opened with a vulnerable call of four hearts. The colonel (South) bid four spades. West passed. North raised to five, and the colonel, never having refused a slam invitation in his pugnacious career, went to six.

"West led the heart four and the colonel trumped. He led a small spade to the ace, just in case East held the lone queen, as East's bidding hinted, he was short in spades. When East showed out it looked as though the spade and diamond queens would have to be conceded. But right there the colonel got his inspiration. He led a heart from dummy and ruffed. He then led the spade jack, whereupon West roared with laughter and taunted: 'No you don't, colonel! This lady will be around after the ace is dead and gone.'

"'Mr. Blank,' said the colonel dis[illegible], witheringly, 'I'll bet you the drinks your queen will not take a trick!'

"The wager was accepted and the battle was on. Four rounds of clubs were played, on the last of which dummy and East discarded hearts. The diamond ace and king were cashed and then the trap was sprung. The colonel exited with his last diamond and East was in with the queen. East, of course, had to return a heart. Declarer ruffed with the spade ten and West was smothered. If he overruffed, dummy's ace would overruff him and declarer's trick would take the [illegible] trick. If he underruffed, dummy would let go the diamond and the spade ace would conclude the festivities.

"The colonel had won his bet. The spade queen had not taken a trick and the drinks were on West.

"Yours truly, K. L. D., Chicago."

My congratulations to the colonel are no less hearty merely because I think I remember this hand as one devised by my friend Sidney Lenz many years ago. It is one of the classic examples of "smother play" and of course depends on a rather fortunate lay of cards. West, for example, must have four clubs and East must be the one that is thrown in lead with the third diamond. If West could take the lead he could return a low spade and thus avoid [illegible] smothered.

Nevertheless I appreciate the consideration and offer the hand as a highly interesting one, despite the [illegible] around its origin.

ONLY 65 MILES PASS HIGHWAY IS UNFINISHED

Only 65 miles of the Monkman Pass highway remains uncompleted, Francis Murphy of Pouce Coupe, president of the Monkman Pass Highway Association, said here Friday. Mr. Murphy said he may "start a subscription fund here" for the highway.

Mr. Murphy recently was in Vancouver in the interests of the northern highway and raised $3,500 in aid of the project. He plans to interview the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and business men concerning the road.

In 1937 55 miles of the highway were finished and 35 miles have been built this year, leaving only 65 miles more to be done before Prince George and the coast can be connected directly with the Peace River district.

This Dummy Easily Makes Good His Hollywood Career

EDGAR BERGEN and CHARLIE McCARTHY

By M. O. PEAK

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—"With your brains and my personality, we can go a long way," said Charlie McCarthy to Edgar Bergen when, 17 years ago, Charlie stepped out of a pine stump in a Chicago carpenter shop and climbed on to the lap of his creator and living prompter, Edgar Bergen!

Red-thatched, wooden-headed Charlie sits there on the top of the world today. The former Irish newsboy imp, in sweater and cap who started in second-rate vaudeville, is now a high-hat star performer—a familiar figure of fame in his [illegible] silk topper and monocle.

Charlie has the dummy field entirely to himself. Until the motion picture can unearth another Bergen, Charlie will continue to occupy unmolested his golden spot in Hollywood's sun. That's what the love-and-kisses clan is afraid of.

On Monday The Bulletin starts a new feature "How To Bec^me a Ventriloquist". The feature is from the pen of Edgar Bergen, ably assisted by Charlie McCarthy, the world's most famous "stooge". Below is given an interview with Bergen and McCarthy, but watch for the big feature on Monday in The Bulletin's Classified Ad pages.

The McCarthy-Bergen home is a luxurious home high on Tower Road, in exclusive Beverly Hills. He has a valet and a private secretary, and receives as much fan mail as many of the established motion picture stars. Yet, no celebrity in the world is as oblivious to his fame and fortune as is Charlie McCarthey.

NO SIGN THERE

When I called at their home, there was no sign of the important members of the Bergen-McCarthy team. But I could feel Charlie's personality prevading the place. Mr. Bergen, who was dictating his life story for a national weekly, asked if I minded waiting for a few minutes, and meanwhile suggested that the dark-haired secretary who looks after Charlie's enormous correspondence and requests for autographed photographs, take me upstairs to see him.

We went up to Charlie's office but he wasn't there. He wasn't in his bedroom suite, nor was he hidden in the closet where I saw his rapidly increasing Hollywood wardrobe. Whenever Charlie goes now, he is properly attired to fit the occasion, whether it be at the races, flying about the country with Bergen, or receiving the Academy Award for outstanding performance.

"Where is Charlie?" I asked, curiously.

IN BERGEN'S ROOM

"He always stays in Mr. Bergen's room," said the secretary. "Come in here and I'll introduce you."

We entered a big front room with twin beds and a chaise lounge. Charlie wasn't reclining on any one of them. The secretary went to a black leather traveling case, about four feet high, in a corner of the room, and unlocked it.

The case was lined with blue corduroy velvet; at the top it was cushioned so that Charlie's head and face fitted snugly into it. The little wooden man stood upright with his back to us. His legs were pulled apart and between them was placed his silk hat.

The secretary lifted Charlie out of his case and sat on the edge of the bed with the dummy on her knee. He had apparently been out late the night before: he still had on his evening clothes, even his [illegible].

It is difficult to believe that Charlie McCarthy is made of wood. You are conscious of a lovable soul and an extraordinary personality entirely apart from the man who imbued him with both. Edgar Bergen's personality is that of a successful young business man with brains and imagination. He has gray eyes, thin brown hair, a delightfully modulated speaking voice and a charming, human smile. He was dressed modestly in a well-tailored, double-breasted gray suit. He has none of the earmarks of a showman. What impresses you about Edgar Bergen is his business head, his unique capability to play a dual role, such as his and Charlie's, and his amazing capacity for work.

I was glad of the opportunity to separately analyze this most unique team in entertainment history. Bergen is Charlie's mouthpiece, but it is Charlie's personality which makes an unforgetable impression.

Uncannily enough, this impish dummy has developed a personality impossible to duplicate. Although they have dummies and stand-ins for Charlie, futile efforts have been made to carve another personality like his. If anything should happen to Charlie McCarthy, he would go the way of all flesh—never to be replaced.

WRITERS CLAIM STORY WEALTH IN NORTH LAND

Two young United States magazine writers, Corey Ford, 36, and Alistair McBain, 30, passed through Edmonton Friday on their way to the coast and took time off to give Canadians some literary advice as well as to expose some of their own literary preferences.

Mr. Ford said Canadians have not realized the wealth of stories present in the north, and and have left this field largely to United States writers.

He said his favorite author is F. Scott Fitzgerald. His Scotch colleague added that "Robbie Burns would be pretty close behind."

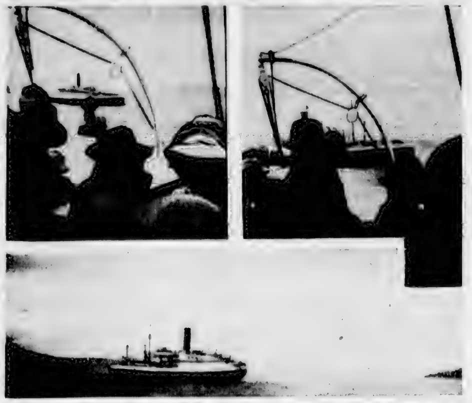
Ascania's Passengers Transferred



The pilot-tender Citadelle transferred the passengers of the liner S.S. Ascania, when she went aground on Bic Rock in the St. Lawrence, to her sister ship, the S.S. Ausonia, which carried them back to Quebec. These pictures were taken from the Citadelle and tell the story of the transfer of passengers from the stricken liner. The almost deserted Ascania is seen (top left) over the rail of the Citadelle, which went out from Father Point. The ship has already settled considerably at the bow. A view of the Ausonia, awaiting the transfer of passengers (top right) was also taken from the pilot-tender. The Ascania (above, bottom) hard aground on Bic Rock.

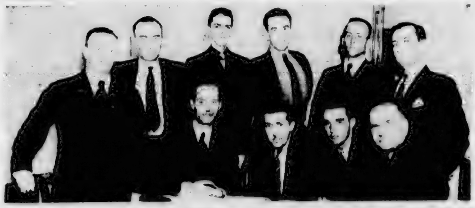
Canadian Fascists Hold First Convention



The first annual convention of the Canadian Fascists was held in secret in Kingston, Ont., as police took steps to prevent any demonstration between the Fascists and anti-Fascists. During the convention a new name, the National Unity Party of Canada, was selected for the organization. Adrian Arcand, Fascist leader of Montreal, was named first national leader of the party and Joseph Farr, Toronto, was named national organizer. The above picture, taken in Kingston, shows delegates to the convention. Left to right: Seated, Adrian Arcand, Josepr Farr, Toronto; D. O. Keefe, Campbellton, N.B., and Marquist Gattene, Montreal. Bomber Dwarfs Largest Land Plane

What a job trying to keep up with these airplane designers! No sooner had the Douglas plant in Santa Monica launched the DC4—largest land plane in the world—than along comes word that another is being built for the army which will make the DC4 look puny in comparison. Just how puny is shown in the picture above, in which an artist has taken a photo of the DC4 and drawn dotted lines corresponding to the size of the projected new plane—a bomber. Specifications are so closely guarded that construction is going on in a building with doors locked and windows painted black. Reports indicate, however, that the new bomber will have a wingspread of 250 feet (as compared with 138 feet for the DC4). It will weigh 160,000 pounds (the DC4 weighs 65,000). It will have six 2,000 horsepower engines (to four for the DC4). It will go 300 miles an hour (compared with about 230 for the DC4). And here's why the army is guarding the new plane so carefully: It will be capable of flying non-stop across the Atlantic and back—with a load of bombs—according to reports.

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

Plumb Screwy

It Takes Time

Here An' There

BASEBALL is one of the world's screwiest businesses—and not because a guy named Hubbell can make a ball shag and truck all the way to the plate. It is screwy because the basic rules of conduct for a long brilliant playing career are so well and widely known that even at Painted Post or Whistle Tank you can find a couple youngsters who know them, yet in spite of this the majority of players have to spend ten or fifteen years in the majors before these simple rules sink through their bone work and reach the brain.

One of these basic rules is for pitchers and it says: "Lay off the fire balls, use your head instead and pitch the kind they can't hit—you'll last longer."

But do pitchers pay any attention to it? They do not. I never saw a pea-green, or even heard of one, who wasn't sure that this basic rule was laid down for guys with weak arms and not for him. Every hurler is sure that he has the greatest arm that ever waved on a mound. He is positive that it can go on smoking 'em over the plate for at least a couple decades. You can't tell a single one of these guys anything. Compared to them a mule is right reasonable.

That is why I never shed any tears when I hear that this chucker and that one has been [illegible] out of the majors with sore flinging arms. They all asked for it. There was Paul Dean and Schoolboy Rowe to mention a couple recent cases and it is not improbable that Vandermeer may be another. There are scores of other major leaguers less prominent who skidded back to the bushes for the same reason. If I had a dollar for every arm that has been ruined by constant fire balls and curves I would buy me the Brooklyn Dodgers and make Al Schacht the playing manager.

Lefty Got Wise In Time

LEFTY GROVE is a fire-baller wh[illegible] of time. He only fogs 'em thr[illegible] his head now and puts them where [illegible] has won him 12 [illegible] of the 15 games [illegible] this season. That is just about as good as [illegible].

The wisdom of this basic axiom of pitching—one that he must have heard since he was knee high to a grasshopper—has finally trepanned its way into Schoolboy Rowe's brain. Playing with Beaumont under the scorching Texas sun, Rowe has resorted to control and headwork in an effort to pitch his way back to the majors. He would never have been chased out of them if he'd used his head a little more than his arm.

Then there is the old matter of [illegible]. Every ballplayer I ever knew who had a good eye and [illegible] ability simply could not resist the urge to "[illegible]" his bat and swing for a homer every time. It was Babe Ruth's shoes [illegible] they were concerned. Every ballplayer who ever had the benefit of [illegible] coaching has been told that he can hit safely [illegible] if he will choke up his grip, just meet the ball and put it where there [illegible]. It usually takes from five to ten years in the majors before [illegible] discovers this fact for himself. It's unbelievable, but [illegible] true.

Bisley Prize Lists Reached By Canadians

BISLEY CAMP, England, July 9.—Canadian marksmen broke into the prize lists of the Empire meeting of the National Rifle Association Friday but first place in current competitions was still beyond their grasp.

SHOOTING EXCELLENT

With general shooting excellent despite miserable weather conditions four marksmen recorded perfect scores of 50 points in the Conan Doyle challenge statuette match at 500 yards yesterday afternoon. The shoot-off will be between Sgt.-Major W. Fraser of the Camerons, F. J. MacLennan of the Cobnam Rifle Club, F. B. Smith of Scotland and T. Vesey of Bristol.

Just one point behind the leaders was Sgt. N. L. Beckett of Hamilton, Ont., whose 49 earned him a place in the $10 prize bracket. Lieut. N. Colville of Vancouver with 48 won $5.

Teams of eight representing England, Ireland and Scotland fired at the long 900, 1,000 and 1,100 yard ranges for the Elcho Challenge Shield and England won with an aggregate of 1,623 points out of a possible 1,800.

The day's other feature, the D[illegible] Challenge Cup at 200 [illegible] saw three marksmen tying with best possible scores of 50. Beckett shared Canadian honors in the match with Sgt. M. F. D[illegible] of Ottawa [illegible] 48. But first prize will be decided by a shoot-off between R. H. Lee of the marines, squadron-leader R. Wallingford of the New Zealand air force and Major D. Fraser of the Army Rifle Club. The two all had perfect scores of 50.

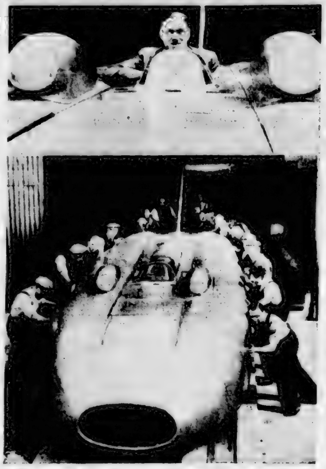
Speed—Speed—More Speed!



This man and his car have travelled over the surface of old Mother Earth at a faster pace than any other human or machine but, never satisfied, they're out to better their mark. Capt. George Eyston is the man peering at you out of the cockpit of his famous Thunderbolt, the car in which he set the land speed record of 312 m.p.h. over Utah's salt flats last year. Capt. Eyston has had the car re-designed since then and is determined to smash the "old" mark. Workmen are seen in the lower picture wheeling the 34-foot car out of the shops at Chiswick, England, at the completion of its rebuilding.

Eyston Talks Chicks But Controls Monster

By HENRY McLEMORE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 9.—He looks and acts as little like a speed demon as any one you could imagine. His wavy hair brushed with gray, and his pale blue eyes look at you from behind horned-rimmed glasses. He is shy, and this trait is accentuated by a reddish moustache on the mousey-side.

His favorite topic of conversation is the raising of chickens, and he would much prefer to discuss incubators than carburetors and cars that thunder across the ground at better than 300 miles an hour.

His name is George E. T. Eyston—Captain George E. T. Eyston—and today he is at Salt Lake City and the salt flats of Bonneville for another assault on his own world's land speed record of 311.42 M.P.H.

The last time I saw the captain—not counting the brief interview in his hotel suite the other day—was in the cold dawn of a day last November. He had just finished a run for the record in his silver Thunderbolt, a seven-ton, 3,000 horsepower monster that whines [illegible] faster than any other man has ever travelled on earth.

MOST EERIE SIGHT

Those runs on the salt beds afford the most eerie sight in sports. I'll never forget the one I saw. We left Salt Lake by plane, in the darkness just before dawn, and were on the beds, 100 miles away, before the sun got there. A cold wind came down from the mountains that rim the desolate waste.

We stationed ourselves at the [illegible] measured mile. The [illegible] provided by state troopers' automobile headlamps. Far down the flat beds, six miles away, the lights of campfires glowed—the campfires of [illegible] Thunderbolt was being readied for [illegible]

Then dawn came, and word came that Eyston had started.

SONG OF SPEED

[illegible] of speed. And [illegible] baton of the chorus of mighty cylinders was Eyston, the quiet blue-eyed man whose hobby is raising chickens.

We peered [illegible] for the first sight of him. But Thunderbolt is silver, and the morning was silver, and it was not [illegible] of us did we see it.

A high, piercing "wheee-e-eee!"

[illegible] colored flame.

A tremble of the earth.

That was all.

SEEKING 333

[illegible]

[illegible] of the driver's seat. Last November he drove exposed and the wind whipped off his goggles, forcing him to make one run driving with one hand. [illegible] the captain doesn't think [illegible]. In fact he admits [illegible] dangerous.

Good luck, Captain! And don't pass any red lights.

Lust, Grayson Score Kayoes In Calgary Ring

CALGARY, July 9.—Young Tunney Lust, of Medicine Hat, established himself as a strong contender for the western Canada middleweight boxing championship last night when he knocked out Sailor Goodland, veteran from Sundre, Alta., in 1.05 minutes of the fifth round in their scheduled 10-round fight.

The bout climaxed a Memorial Hall card that saw Gordon Grayson of Edmonton score a third round knockout over Billy Emke, Vancouver; Billy McRae, Calgary, [illegible] Lewis, Calgary; and Ed Moody, Carbon, won on points from Cowboy Hodds, Turner Valley.

Glenn Cunningham On Lecture Tour

LAWRENCE, Kas., July 9.—Glenn Cunningham returned to his Alma Mater Friday as a member of the University of Kansas extension [illegible].

E. H. Lindley, chancellor, said Cunningham would tour the state giving lectures on athletics and his personal experiences. The [illegible] for [illegible] with the runner's salary not disclosed.

Edmonton Man Wins $2,000 Daily Double

VANCOUVER, July 9.—One of the largest daily double bet payoffs in the history of Vancouver race tracks—$2,022.70—worked out at Lansdowne Park Friday and only one person—an Edmonton railroad man, Bill Garthwaite—held a winning ticketh.

Shasta Spark, a 65 to one shot, came romping home ahead of Nicasio and the favorite, Wittora, in the second race to return $133.40, $51.40 and $33.50.

Five double tickets had been purchased on Shasta Spark but only William Garthwaite of 12921 114 street, Edmonton, played to Stolen Color, which took the third event over Tetra Play and Vanbank. Mr. Garthwaite accepted a cheque for $2,000 and took the remainder in cash.

Sahara Chief took the feature Royal City handicap and a purse of $600, opening up a long lead from the start. The favorite, Legerdemain, was second and Maizie B third. The winner returned $7.00, $3.00 and $3.70 in the pari-mutuel machines.

The one-two bet, Chief's Lady to Blanden in the sixth event, paid off at $31.75.

Roughriders Lose Services Fleet Halfback

REGINA, July 9.—Definite announcement that fleet Ralph Pierce had retired was made Regina Roughrider officials Friday as George Gray, chairman of the players' committee, named the 1938 backfield, for the coming Western Canada rugby conference season.

Paul Kirk, the Minnesota product, who joined the team in 1934 along with Pierce, will also be missing although it is likely that he will continue in western football with the Edmonton entry. It is now definite that Kirk will not be a member of the Roughriders.

Reginans have secured another newcomer to fill the breach. James Farasey, a 180-pound back from Savior College in Cincinnati will be in Regina July 28. He gets high ranking as an all-round footballer.

Farasey will team with Leo Dananer and Howard Cleveland, two all-star Kansas products and Gordon Meikle, from Cobough, Ont., to give the Reginans new strength in the backfield.

The balance of last year's backfield is available. It includes Jimmy Lander, Bert Nelson, Bill Brokovski, Paul Patrick, Pete Kawryluk, Si Simonson and Harry Guest.

Cyclone to Meet Bey in Mud Match

By KEN. METHERAL

LOW hisses echoed through the spacious Empire Theatre last night, quickly they increased in volume until the building was rocking with the boos, jeers and bellows of some 1,000 wrestling fans, Bairam Bey, the Turk, had entered the ring.

Bairam held up his hands in an appeal to the gathering that they listen to him—the announcer lifted his hands, too. And still the building rocked and trembled. After what was undoubtedly one of the greatest ovations any villain ever received in Edmonton the fans listened to the Turk.

"Ladies and Gentlemen"—everybody in the theatre leaned forward with interest—the bounder must have something important to say to start off like that—"Ladies and Gentlemen, I came here over a month ago from the United States because your promoter here, Mike Cutcher, promised that I would be able to wrestle in my own way—the old country style—in the mud. But every week I have had to wrestle the American way. And I don't like that kind of wrestling. I want lots of mud."

WANTS MUD MATCH

"I want Cutcher to give me a mud match as he promised. I want it right away—next week. If he won't give it to me, I go back to the States."

Then, spying Mike in a corner, he called him to the ring—tried to get the Cutcher in the ring. But Mike stayed outside. Poor Mike! How that boy perspired—'Twas worse than a two-hour workout to Cutcher. For Mike is one awful bashful lad. He didn't want to get in there before all the people.

Then the wily Mike told Bey he could have his old mud match pretty soon and scrammed. He [illegible] into the basement and slunk to the farthest corner.

CUTCHER AGREES

Bairam Bey high-tailed after Cutcher—hounded him, pleaded with him and won his point. He meets Cyclone Mackey, who defeated Klem Musek in the main event on last night's card at the Empire theatre in a single fall, at the Empire theatre next Friday night in a mud match.

And what a match that was last night! Minute after [illegible] by as the two mighty grapplers slipped from one hold into another, charging from one side of the ring to the other, swinging fists, feet and each other. And Klem Kusek seemed to be having the best of it, but the wily Mackey always managed to work himself to the ropes to break holds and he always returned for more.

Then Cyclone got Kusek on the canvas. And it was all over. In vain Klem twisted and turned in a gallant but futile attempt to break the punishing leg lock. At length he lay grovelling in agony on the canvas, while Referee Lavoie awarded the first fall to Cyclone Mackey. It was the winning fall for Kusek couldn't return to the fray after a long rest interval.

Hardly had the echoes of Chief Shute's gong died away when the Cyclone found himself in Kusek's famed and cruel headlock. Mackey lifted Kusek high in the air, then slammed him to the mat. But still Klem clung grimly to the Mackey head. But not for long. Cyclone drove a terrific right, that would have done honor to Detroit's famed Brown Bomber, square into Klem's tummy. Klem let go—he sprawled half across the ring and slipped to the mat. The Cyclone had struck.

Enraged as Kusek continued to tie him up in holds, Cyclone wrapped his wiry fingers around Klem's throat and would have choked him to death had not Lavoie stepped in and broken the hold. A right to the head didn't help Kusek a bit and two reverse body slams proved plumb bad.

KUSEK ANGRY

Rallying, the angry Kusek piled into the Cyclone in typical Kusek fashion, drove Cyclone to the ropes, in fact drove him clean through the ropes, then hauled him back in and repeated the performance. The Cyclone was now almost a light breeze.

But he couldn't be stopped. Soon the breeze was beginning to ruffle Klem's blond thatch. Quickly it stiffened, became a gale and Kusek was on the canvas writhing in agony as the [illegible] Mackey applied pressure on Kusek's leg. It was all over.

Kusek lay on the canvas as the Cyclone was awarded the fall. Klem never left the ring for the interval. He couldn't. When the time came to resume the match, Kusek was still lying on the canvas, being ministered to by seconds and friends. But he couldn't continue and had to default the rest of the match to Mackey.

Two of the finest preliminary bouts ever presented by Mike Cutcher were fought last night as Hughie Adams, who once were whiskers, and Bob "Bad Boy" Cummings tore at each other's throats for 45 minutes for a draw. Robert

Cincinnati Reds End Six Game Losing Streak

CHICAGO, July 9.—A flurry of home runs brought to a climax by Billy Myers' 10th inning smash enabled Cincinnati Reds to defeat Chicago Club, 7-6, and end a six-game losing streak Friday. A five-run ninth-inning Cub rally forced the contest into overtime.

Myers' winning clout was the sixth of the game. Wally Berger hit two others for the Reds and Ival Goodman one, his 21st of the season. Frank Demaree and Ken O'Dea connected for the Cubs.

Cincinnati	300 200 100 1—	7	13	0
Chicago	000 000 105 0—	6	11	0

Derringer, Cascarella, Walters and Lombardi; Carlton, Root, Russell, French and O'Dea.

JINX BROKEN

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Giants evened matters with their Boston jinx, Jim Turner, Friday by whipping the Bees 4-2 on homers by Lou Chiozza and Alex Kampouris. That win was the second of the season for the Giants over Turner, who has beaten the National League leaders twice.

Boston	200 000 000—	2	4	0
New York	001 030 00x—	4	7	1

PHILLIES TRAMPLED

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.—Brooklyn Dodgers walloped four pitchers for 15 hits and trampled the Phillies 13-2 Friday. Rookie Rosy Rosen paced the Brooklyn barrage, connecting for a homer, double and single, driving in three runs and scoring four himself.

took the first fall with a punishing leg lock similar to the one later used by Mackey to vanquish Kusek. Then Hughie came back with a rally that had the crowd on their feet cheering. He drove Cummings about the ring—almost running after him, felled Robert with a right smash and applied an Adams' special for the tying fall.

DRAW

The grapplers weren't able to untangle their legs and arms before Chief Shute rapped on the gong. The forty-five minute time limit was up and referee Louie Lavoie declared the bout a draw.

NEW TREAT

The opening event ended in a draw too as Don Estes and Popeye Harding waltzed through four rounds of fast and colorful boxing. It was a new treat for wrestling addicts, that boxing card, and they really liked it.

Estes forced the pace in the opening round. But from then on the bout was fairly even. Estes had trouble getting past Popeye's long left.

Fighting Fox Back

NEW YORK, July 9.—Fighting Fox, Kentucky Derby and Preakness disappointment from William Woodward's Belair stud, returns to competition today with Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Stormscud and four other three-year-olds as his rivals in the $10,000 Empire City handicap.

Fatally Injured

SEATTLE, July 9.—Jockey Fred Gribble, 18, San Mateo, Calif., was fatally injured Friday when his mount, Made Ele fell with him just after the start of the first race at Longacres, near here.

England's Wally Hammers Aussies

Wally Hammond, England's cricket test match captain, is pictured making a forward stroke off the Australian bowler O'Reilly during his brilliant first innings against the Antipodeans in the second test meeting. Hammond batted flawlessly for over five hours to score 210 not out and stem a collapse of the British batting, threatened when the first two wickets fell for meagre scores. A crowd of 31,000, including King George, watched the match. Australia forced a draw as she did in the first test. Three more matches remain to be played.

Billy Drever Named Best Junior During Vancouver Cricket Festival

VANCOUVER, July 9—By defeating the Vancouver Wednesday League eleven Friday through scoring 157 runs for loss of nine wickets against their opponent total of 125, Victoria retained their unbeaten record in the Vancouver cricket festival, and won the Con Jones cup with four straight victories in the tournament.

BILLY DREVER
(wins coveted award.)

Vancouver finished second while Calgary took third place with a trio of victories and two defeats. The Albertans swamped Okanagan today, scoring 237 runs for the loss of six wickets and then declared, afterwards dismissing the interior side for 86.

Bill Drever, clever Edmonton youngster, playing with Calgary, won a bat donated by George J. Dyke, Victoria, for the best performance of the week by a junior. Drever made an even 100 Friday and then retired after a chanceless display of free-scoring all around the wicket.

A second-wicket partnership between Bill Drever and Jimmy Weaver, produced 123 runs for Calgary and put them on the high-way to success. Drever hit nine fours in his century and scored all round the wicket. Weaver's 56 also contained nine boundaries, while George Pain hit hard to compile 38, and Ivan Clarke smashed five consecutive balls to the ropes and sent the next one for a couple of runs.

PAIN STARS

Okanagan batsmen found the fast off-breaks of George Pain too much to overcome and half the side were out for 20 runs. Alan Quinn and A. D. Carr-Hilton made a stand, however, but Pain effected a separation and Howard Bailes caught and bowled Carr-Hilton. J. Ascroft carried his bat after a merry knock. Pain had an analysis of five wickets for 38 runs.

Calgary Brothers Battle Martells Here This Sunday

This Sunday the Martell brothers will again take up their regular weekly job defending the Eaton challenge golf trophy at the Highlands Club.

Their opponents [illegible] afternoon will be the two R[illegible]son brothers of Calgary, Johnny and Kemp. They rate in the southern city like the Martells rate here—mighty hard to beat.

On July 17 Bobby Manahan and Tom Vickers of Municipal get a crack at the Eaton bowl while the following week Harold B[illegible] and Stan Van Aalst of Calgary are the challengers.

City to Send Tennis Squad To Banff Meet

Headed by Andrew "Shorts" Purcell a formidable Edmonton delegation is expected to invade Banff for the annual tournament of the provincial tennis association, which will be held on the courts of the C.P.R. Banff Springs Hotel, commencing on August 1.

A large number of local stars are contemplating taking their holidays at that time in order to take part in the tournament.

Entries close on July 28.

Prospective contestants should make reservations for accommodation at the earliest possible moment by contacting Dr. Quigley of Banff, who is in charge of the housing problem in connection with the tournament.

Several local players are also intending to compete in the Western Canada championships, which will be held at the courts of Glencoe Club, Calgary, commencing on July 23. This promises to be a headline tournament, with star players all over the west taking part.

Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Hans Holbein, Raphael, Bertillon, Prof. Edward S. Morse, and President James A. Garfield were among the famous "southpaws" outside of sports circles.

British Open Title Lifted By Whitcombe

SANDWICH, Eng., July 9.—Battered by a gale, [illegible] by flying sand, Reggie Whitcombe won the British open [illegible] Friday and [illegible] Britain's trophies to the [illegible] of Great Britain's golfing [illegible].

For 15 years the record of the three inseparable Whitcombe brothers Ernest, 48, Charles, 42, and Reggie, 40 has been [illegible] trophy in the United Kingdom, but the open always has escaped them.

Friday the law of averages finally balanced the Whitcombe books. The first man out, Reggie came from sixth place to first, in the third round [illegible] 72 [illegible] 295.

[illegible] was runner-up to Alf Padgham at Hoylake in 1936, was second at 297 and Henry Cotton, the defending champion, third at 298.

Whitcombe and Adams, playing together on the last round, finished a good three hours before Cotton. Whitcombe hardly could help recalling a similar experience a year ago when under precisely the same circumstances, Cotton came from behind on the last nine and beat him by two strokes.

Seven-Times Champ Beaten 7-Up in Final

Miss McIvor Only Edmontonian to Win a Flight — Mrs. Michaels of Calgary Wins Bronze Event

CALGARY, July 9.—Dominating play from start to finish, Miss Paddy Arnold of the Calgary Golf and Country Club, won the 1938 championship of the Alberta branch, Canadian Ladies' Golf Union, Friday.

In the 36-hole final, Miss Arnold defeated Mrs. Roy Horne, of the Bowness club, Calgary, the defending champion, 7 and 6. At the end of the 18-hole morning round she was two up.

Winning her first provincial championship, the new "Queen of Alberta" golf had a margin of four [illegible] 14th [illegible] 54 for the next 12. The dethroned champion picked up her ball on the fifth hole of the morning round.

Mrs. Horne had won the provincial title seven times.

Miss M. McIvor of Edmonton won the first flight (Silver) competition, defeating Mrs. E. V. Rose of Lethbridge, 3 and 2 while the consolation event (Silver) went to Miss Molly Dunford, Calgary, who won from Mrs. S. Maddocks, Edmonton, 3 and 6.

In the [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Calgary, defeated Mrs. [illegible] Calgary, 2 and 1 and in the [illegible] (Bronze) Mrs. M[illegible] was the winner. She defeated Mrs. B. Greig of Red Deer, 2 and 1. The second flight (Bronze) was won by Mrs. G. Cameron, Calgary, with a 1 and 2 win over Mrs. G. Lonsdale of Banff.

Kaycees, Belmonts in Bitter Struggle Sunday

COLUMBUS Club, the cellar-dwelling club in the Edmonton Senior Baseball League that hasn't been able to get going this year, lock horns with the second-place Belmonts at Renfrew Park Sunday afternoon. The game will start at 3:00 p.m.

It will be a bitter struggle on the sabbath for both clubs are badly in need of a win. Kaycees with only four wins to their credit [illegible] are dropping [illegible] behind the pack. In fact if they don't start winning a few ball games in a hurry they are likely to sink right out of the league. But the Columbus Club has a mighty fine array of ball players. So fine in fact that pre-season [illegible] rated them as one of the teams to beat in the league. And [illegible] finished yet.

HEFTY SWATTERS

The main trouble with the Kaycees is their trouble to hit in the pinches. They have some hefty swatters on the club and a nice brand of tossing, but they just can't seem to get together. Players like Bergen, Mix and Bob Fritz can [illegible], while Rattlesnake and Eddie Kronfield are capable of turning in as good a job on the mound as any twirler in the league.

Belmonts need a win just about as badly as Kaycees if they hope to keep pace with the flying Arrow Busses, current leaders of the senior loop. A loss for the North Edmonton nine would be disastrous, skidding them into a tie with the hard-hitting Army and Navy Cardinals.

The old veteran Herman Loblick is the likely starter in the Belmont hurling staff. Should the Spruce Grove slabsman not be ready, Manager Harney will throw Fiss into the game.

Columbus pitching may be either Eddie Kronfield or Chief Jimmy Rattlesnake. Both are good slabmen and can be depended on to give the North Edmonton stickers lots of trouble.

John Lefty Ducey will be calling the balls and strikes in his usual colorful style, while Herb Coxford is the probable base umpire.

Eighth Place Horse Makes Mutuel Payoff

CHICAGO, July 9.—They paid off on a horse that finished eighth at Arlington Park Friday.

After [illegible] and a photo placed Almac second, another photo was needed to determine third. Martin Barton's number finally went up and the mutuels began paying off an $8.60 show price as some tore up their Merry Peter tickets.

[illegible] Martin Barton [illegible] Merry Peter third. The track decided to pay off on both horses. So up went Merry Peter's number and $3.80 to those who still held tickets.

TODAY'S MARKETS

At Toronto

TORONTO, July 9—Trading was concentrated in the mines, especially the junior golds, in Saturday's short session of the Toronto Exchange. Prices were a bit heavy in the first hour but the tone improved towards the close. Volume was about a half million shares.

MacLeod touched 3.60 and held most of the 7-cent gain and Hard Rock added about 5 cents. Wright-Hargreaves, [illegible], Naybob, McWatters, Stadacona and Partanen were strong spots and active. With exception of McIntyre, which was up a small fraction, senior golds were inclined to weakness.

Waite-Amulet advanced to a new high at 5.45 up 25 cents. International Nickel showed a net gain and Noranda and Ventures dropped back.

Papers showed little change. Beverages were unchanged aside from a fractional gain for Walkers.

OILS DECLINE AT CALGARY IN DULL TRADING

Oils on the Calgary stock exchange showed a general decline during dull trade Friday, the turnover totalling 26,195 shares.

Okalta recorded a six point loss at 1.54.

Firestone at 15½, Reward at 3½ and Weymarn at 2 reversed the trend and showed fractional gains. Fractionally lower were Globe at 8, Phillips at 16¾, Richland at 4 and Lethbridge Pete at 2¾. United lost a point at 15½. C and E, at 2.45 was off three points.

British Dominion at 8, Highwood at 11½, Mercury at 13 and Prairie at 35 were unchanged.

As soon as four miles of roadway can be completed, Ram River Oils Limited will start its No. 1 well. The road is needed so the company can haul in diamond drilling equipment. Oil should be encountered at Ram River at a maximum depth of 3,000 feet.

North Taber Royalties, a Vancouver company, has spudded No. 1 well.

Rexana Petroleums well in Kootenay Dome, 40 miles west of Calgary, is drilling at 3,850 feet. The formation has recently changed from light to very hard.

The crew at Vantage will run 16-inch casing as soon as it arrives, within the next few days.

Royalite has started work on a location for its No. 34 well on LSD 7 of Sec. 5, Twp. 19, Rge. 2, W5, one location south of Vulcan-Brown, and a location west of Mercury Royalties, also half a mile east of East Crest No. 4. The site is 500 feet south of the north line and 660 feet west of the east line of the LSD 7.

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, July 9—Report from Edmonton stockyards for week ending July 9:

Receipts:	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Saturday	91	49	71	38

Receipts during this past week were very light, but buyers were operating freely and as a result trading was brisk and the market generally keen, particularly on the better grades of butchers. Prices on the whole were a full 25c per cwt. higher for the week, and in spots 50c as compared to the close of the previous week, especially cows. Plain kinds, however, especially thin yearlings, are hard to move and this latter are selling as low as $2.50. The following are the quotations on the basis of grass cattle:

Good to choice butcher steers $5.50 to $6, fair to medium $4.50 to $5, and common to fair $3.50 to $4.50; good butcher heifers $5 to $5.50, common to medium $3.50 to $4.50; good cows $3.50 to $4, common to medium $2.50 to $3.25; canners and cutters $1.75 to $2.25; bulls, $2.25 to $3.

There is fair action on the stocker market, particularly on anything quality. Prices generally holding firm. Bulk of better kinds of stocker steers $3.50 to $4, other kinds from $3.5 down.

The calf market was showing an upward tendency. On Friday calves were marked up fully 50c per cwt. higher, with good to choice kinds going at $5.50 to $6 and others from $5 down, [illegible] $2.50 for thin undesirables.

Friday hogs were stronger and sold at $11.25 for trucked bacons. Selects bringing a premium of 50c per cwt. and butchers discounted 50c per cwt.

The bulk of sheep and lamb arrivals consist of plain undesirable kinds, [illegible] effect on [illegible] $7 [illegible] passenger business was being handled.

His duties comprised the selling and collecting of all tickets, accepting freight at way stations and issuing bills of lading therefor. This post was continued until business warranted the appointment of regular agents.

On the inauguration of regular passenger train service into Edmonton in July, 1910, there was a city ticket staff all ready to sell tickets and handle passenger business, Mr. Philp recalled.

Mr. Philp has worked at his railway career at Port Hope, Waubaushene, Lorneville Junction, Midland, Lindsay, Kingston, Brockville, Morrisburg, Trenton, all in Ontario, and also at Yarmouth Junction, Maine, Montreal, and Edmonton.

He married in 1899 to Miss Florence Evelyn Brown at Midland, Ontario, and has two sons, Donald and Clarence, both married, who are living in Toronto and are engaged in the advertising business.

Mr. Philp, in addition to his railway work, also found time to set up a record in his service club work. He has been secretary of the Edmonton Rotary Club for the past twenty years, a position he still occupies. The local club was founded in 1916 and he has been its secretary since 1918.

ROTARY CONFERENCES

He has attended three Rotary International conferences, most of the district conferences and numerous executive conferences.

He is a member of the Ivanhoe Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; of the Edmonton Club, and one of the early members of the Mayfair Golf Club.

Mr. Philp plans to remain in Edmonton.

NEW AGENT

Mr. MacDougall, new city passenger agent, has seen railway service since 1912 at Winnipeg, Brandon, Calgary and Edmonton.

He began work with the Charlottetown Steam Navigation Company and was assistant purser there from 1908 to 1911. Later he was with the treasury department of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

C.N.R. Official Lauds Employee

Work of Joseph F. Philp, city passenger agent, who retired Saturday after 53 years service with the company, will always be cherished as worthy of remembrance, said W. C. Owens, Edmonton, general superintendent of Alberta lines for the Canadian National Railways.

SAW CHANGES

"The period of Mr. Philp's long service with the company saw railroading grow from its troubled infancy to its present vigor. He witnessed [illegible] many triumphs of vision over difficulty [illegible] which [illegible] the history of railroading in Canada," he said.

"Naturally I am proud to extend the tribute of my esteem, and congratulations to Mr. Philp upon rounding out 53 years of unbroken and useful service with the C. N. R.

"It is my sincere wish that Mr. Philp will enjoy many years of bouyant health, so that an age of ease may gracefully crown a life of labor", Mr. Owens concluded.

GOLD TOWN IS BEING CARVED OUT OF NORTH

to be near the scene of operations. Your city lies at the gateway to this great new north."

At the same time he outlined the wonderful opportunities that this development will bring to Edmonton business houses.

"Toronto owes a great deal of its wealth and development to its position as the central point for the great mining areas in central and northern Ontario. Vancouver draws heavily upon the mining areas in northern British Columbia and the Yukon. Edmonton, situated as it is, has even greater opportunities than either of these other great cities.

GETTING INTO FIELD

"I was interested to notice that some Edmonton businessmen have already taken a page out of Toronto's and Vancouver's experience and are sending representatives into the mining camps to contact the miners and prospectors on their own fields in an effort to get their business.

"Those businessmen are to be commended for their foresight. In those mining camps and communities, which are just beginning to develop, there are men who need every kind of merchandise from nails to inner spring mattresses and from cigarettes to plum puddings. They are just sitting there waiting for someone to go in and show them what they need—someone who will help them solve their problems and sit down and talk costs and price.

There is something about the personal contact you get by actually meeting a sales or business representative that speaks far louder than price lists and discounts. It makes a man feel important to know that the businessmen are taking an interest in him and his affairs and value his purchasing power [illegible]

NOT SO DIFFICULT

"As far as the economic conditions facing those who are interested [illegible] the north are concerned, in my opinion they are not nearly so difficult as those which [illegible] districts of the Alaskan peninsula, and particularly the Arctic coast of Alaska where I spent several [illegible] of development in Yellowknife and Goldfields are not nearly so difficult as you might expect.

It is not intended to do any major development work on the B.E.A.R. properties—11 groups of claims at Yellowknife and three on Gordon Lake, as well as the silver mine at Contact Lake—this summer, he said. This year's program calls only for diamond drill testing and general geological examination. Then, during the winter, they will plan a development program for next summer, based upon this summer's discoveries.

The Sumps Move On - - -

A Bulletin Short Story Complete On This Page Every Saturday

- - - by M. O. Moran

THE Sumps had been out of work for so long a time they had forgotten what work is. And God knows they were glad to forget.

There was a lot of other things about the Sumps that God knew, but which seemed to be more or less hidden from other people, noticeably the sheriff.

The sheriff is a busy person these times, or would be if he listened to all the demands made upon him. This fact the Sumps at least were not slow in grasping. They were slow enough in other things. But they had no reason to hurry. Not now.

Time had been when the dark of Winter morning had seen them scurrying like half famished rats for the chance to live. The factory whistle had long been silenced—and the Sumps were still living.

The Sumps came over the Summit like the Argonauts of forty-nine. That is, they had the same high hopes in their breasts. Otherwise there were differences. Instead of an oxcart the Sumps drove a car. It was a good looking car. Mr. Sump had got it from his first wife's brother, who had got it in front of a theatre. And then the Sumps carried no grub stake. They lived on the country. They had learned how.

But like the Argonauts the Sumps had come for gold — real gold. Gold to be washed out of the mountain sides or wherever it is that gold is found. The Sumps had not bothered about the details; the main fact was that the Sumps were going to California to do placer mining. The Sumps read the newspapers, and the newspapers fairly glittered with the pleasant possibilities of placer mining.

The Sumps came over the Summit. "We're here," said Mr. Sump, slapping Mrs. Sump on the knee. "We're here, Kids," said Mrs. Sump to the three half-grown children in the rear seat. It was a matter of pride with Mr. Sump that he had insisted on a marriage ceremony. He had done it because he was the father of the two girls (the little boy had come along with Mrs. Sump), and for that reason, he explained, he always married his women.

But in this instance it had been somewhat difficult to bring the affair to the altar. The lady had laughed at the idea until he told her he was a veteran with ten thousand dollars insurance. Later she found out he had lied.

CABIN INTERIOR IS BARE

It was early afternoon when the Sumps came over the Summit. The heat of an Autumn day was tempered by wandering breezes fragrant with spice. Below them and around them were forests of pine and cedar, and mountain ranges that dimmed to a pale blue in the distance.

They drove slowly. In the back seat the children drowsed among the bundles of clothing and cooking utensils, but Mrs. Sump, straight-backed and alert, scanned the surroundings sharply. An overgrown trail leading off from the highway arrested her attention.

"Pull up, pop. Go up there."

"Too narrow," he objected. "Jest a sheep trail."

"They's been a car up there already. See the tracks. Ought to be a herder's cabin there. Better try."

The trail became indistinct in deep ferns, but at the end of a quarter mile it opened onto a bare meadow, where the grass had been cropped close to the red dust. As they had supposed, the trail terminated at a sheep herder's cabin. It was, however, the end of the season. The sheep had already been taken off and driven down to the lower valleys.

With all eclat of a homecoming the children tumbled out of the car and hurriedly located the well. There they proceeded to slake their thirst out of a dipper made from a tomato tin. And Mr. and Mrs. Sump, leisurely descending in their turn, opened the unlocked door.

That the door was unlocked occasioned no surprise. It is the pleasant hospitality of the hills (the country people call it the hill law) to leave all cabins open. And also to leave sufficient stores within the cabins for the wayfarer who may chance by. A night's shelter and one or two meals is his for the taking, but he must never take all. If the stores are low he may even leave some from his own outfit, and invariably he leaves a small supply of chopped firewood.

The Sumps entered, and then stopped short. They knew the hill law. They had opened the door with the most agreeable expectations. And the cabin was bare. There was nothing in it.

"What the hell!" exclaimed Mr. Sump.

"We been gypped," cried Mrs. Sump. "Some one has been here afore us. It's cleaned out. They've took everything—even the stove. They must of had a truck."

"Then them was truck tracks we saw. Why didn't you tell me them was truck tracks? Then I'd a-knowed. Now what are we goin' to do?"

"We'd ought to have a truck," said Mrs. Sump thoughtfully.

MIKE BRENT NOT HOME

The Sumps had never heard of Mike Brent. Mike was a typical prospector, a gaunt bearded man that the mountains had claimed for their own. Those old-timers hark to no man's commands, they assume no obligations. They came into the country after the Chinese had starved on their findings and gone away.

But the white prospector still stayed on. In the course of time he became rooted in his surroundings. The profound calm of the mountains unfitted him for any other life.

Mike Brent's cabin was in a leafy covert, approached by a fern-obliterated trail. That is, it had been obliterated all summer. But one sparkling day a long dormant public spirit turned over inside of him and with something analagous to civic pride he cleared and widened his trail.

And the Sumps, returning from the herder's cabin, sore with frustration and hungry as hounds smelled the new made trail and drew up near Mike Brent's cabin.

He was not at home. That made no difference to the Sumps. They were not on a social call. They found what they had come for—food and blankets. There was not much food and not many blankets. But what was there they took. They included the mattress. And then Mr. Sump looked around for the poke of gold dust.

Simple trusting prospectors. There are just two places they consider suitable for concealing their treasure. One is behind a stone in the fireplace, and the other is in a tin can under the woodpile. Mr. Sump located the gold dust under the woodpile. It was a very little poke, not more than a [illegible].

After a refreshing drink at the well, the Sumps moved on. They drove away with a [illegible] sense of righteousness. For they'd left the stove and the kindling.

That night Mike Brent walked the five miles to the deputy sheriff's. The deputy sheriff kept a store near the railroad station. All the language that Mike Brent had learned on the Barbary Coast thirty years before now flowed from his lips in the recital of the robbery. The deputy sheriff was impressed.

"I can see how you feel about it," he said. "I'm sorry it happened to you, Mike."

"Well, what you going to do about it?"

"What can I do? Tell me who they are, and where they went, and I'll get 'em."

"Do you think I'd be here if I knew all that? That's for you to find out. You got a car. Go after 'em. Go after 'em now. They're somewhere on the road."

"I can't leave my store. Besides there's dozens of them on the road. I can't stop everybody. The county jail is full. It won't hold no more. No, Mike, there's not a thing we can do about it. There's too many of them. Some fool stories in the papers about easy gold for the picking up have headed them into the hills. When they get hungry they'll leave us again. Go home, Mike, and forget 'em."

"Go home? What'll I go home to? They've took my blankets. They've took my food. They've stole my dust. Go home to what?" Again Mike broke into the coherencies of a forgotten argot, and while still in that condition he staggered out into the night.

Poor Mike. The Sumps had taken more than his goods or his gold. They'd taken his thirty years' faith in humanity. They'd broken the hill law.

STOP WHEN GAS GOES

In looking for a camp the Sumps preferred a place where they had neighbors. Sometimes these neighbors were wanderers like themselves, huddled down by a stream, or along the way of the irrigation ditch, sometimes they were a simple and hospitable rancher's family with cows and chickens and vegetables smeared all over the foreground and sometimes there was no picking and choosing.

Wherever their gas gave out, that was where they stopped. And as their gas was about to give out now, so now the Sumps stopped. They were on the outskirts of a small mountain town, one of these ghost towns that had died with hydraulic mining fifty years before.

While some of the old buildings that still bordered the streets were not habitable, others, shaded by vine covered porches, were occupied by the irrigation ditch workers and their families, and the adjoining small meadows were given over to fowl runs, truck gardens and cow pastures.

The Sumps viewed their surrounding with approval.

"No need to sleep under this tree," said Mrs. Sump. "That old building there—it's a church, ain't it?—let's sleep in there." A flicker of dormant domesticity lighted up her eye.

"That's a rattlesnake hant," explained Mr. Sump. "No, we'll stay out here in the open. Some of them boards will make us a good fire though."

"They's lots of chickens around," observed Mrs. Sump.

"Yep. Colored ones. Ain't got no use for them white leghorns myself."

"And Ellie's tight smart at milking. We still got that pail in the car."

Ellie, so slight and undersized that she looked like a child instead of a sixteen-year-old girl, said pensively, "I like warm milk."

"You'd ought to get it here," Mrs. Sump spoke judicially. "Here if anywheres."

The Sumps made out for the night with the cedar tree and Mike Brent's blankets. His entire store of grub was consumed in one meagre meal, and if it hadn't been for the fire of the meeting-house boards the Sumps would have been cold as well as hungry. Their own equipment they had traded that same morning for a new tire.

Due to their early rising breakfast was considerably better than dinner had been. Fried chicken and warm milk figured largely on the menu. But excellent as breakfast was it failed to put Mr. Sump into a good humor. With a lowering scowl on his face he fingered the small can of gold dust that had been Mike Brent's.

"He must of had more," he complained to Mrs. Sump. "Don't tell me this was all he had. Them hills is full of gold. He had more hid somewhere. I got a mind to go back and get it."

Mrs. Sump was lying under the cedar tree. Ellie was playing cards with her sister . . . The whole scene was one of innocent happiness.

"It's some ways back," said Mrs. Sump. "Be easier to wash it out for ourselves. Remember we read them two Los Angeles gals was washing out ten dollars a day?"

"Ten dollars a day!" repeated Mr. Sump. "Then that old coot must of had plenty. I'm goin' back."

"He might be there now," warned Mrs. Sump.

"Why would he be there? He'd be out washin' more gold. He knows where to get it, don't he? Ten dollars a day."

"Let Ellie go first and find out where it's hid. He won't think nothin' if he sees a kid snoopin' around. Then if he ain't there you can go and pick it up."

"Yep, pop, let me go," said Ellie.

"It's quite a spell back," wavered her father.

"I'll pick up a ride."

Mr. Sump selected a leg of fried chicken, and bit into it reflectively.

"Well, it could be done that way," he decided. "Yep Ellie, you can go ahead."

GOING FOR A RIDE

Mike Brent had just finished laying cedar boughs in his cabin to take the place of his stolen mattress and blankets. He considered boughs and newspapers a poor substitute for a bed, but until he could do better he must put up with it. After a supperless, sleepless night he found himself thankful that the thief had not taken the stove and dishes as well. He was starting out to negotiate some groceries on credit at the deputy sheriff's store, when Ellie came smiling down his fresh-turned widened trail.

There was nothing in Ellie's appearance to connect her with the theft of the previous day, nor to suggest her present errand. To him she was just a little girl with an engaging smile.

"Lost, little sister?" In looking on her bright tousled head his heart lifted with the same joy he took in the Spring flowers, or the soft trill of the earliest robin.

"No, I ain't lost," she said coolly. "I jest come to see you, mister."

"Come to see me? What did you come to see me for, child?"

"I thought you might tell me about gold diggin'."

Mike Brent stared at her wordlessly. He was aware that there was an unhealthy activity throughout the hills—men and women staggering under the weight of sluice boxes and pickaxes in a helpless search for gold. But this little girl, this delicate sweet-faced baby. He checked back those expletives that were returning so readily to his lips the last twenty-four hours.

"Has all hell turned loose in the mountains? Is humanity souring out here in the hills? Who sent us this influx of unfits? Child, have you a mother, have you a home?"

"Sure," answered Ellie, her eyes darting hither and thither, in her quest of hidden gold. "We're campin' up by town. We come in last night. Can't we go in your house and talk, mister?"

"Go home to your mother. If I had anything at all here I'd say take it with you. Yesterday I was robbed. Today I have nothing—not even food. Go away."

"You mean you ain't got any gold at all?" asked Ellie incredulously. "But don't you dig ten dollars worth every day? What did you do with it all?"

"There's days when I don't dig ten cents worth. Go back and spread that around your camp. Not ten cents worth."

"I don't believe you," said Ellie. She turned up the trail again [illegible] went back to the highway.

Mr. Sump, as certain as he [illegible] the miner had a bigger cache of gold somewhere around he[illegible] traded in the little dust he [illegible] taken from the woodpile [illegible] and went back to the [illegible] dwelling himself. It was [illegible] early forenoon when he [illegible] there, and according to [illegible] lations the time when the [illegible] would be out at his work [illegible] parked his car in a [illegible] thicket near the highway, and [illegible] down the trail on [illegible].

But Mike Brent was a[illegible]. He had just returned [illegible] store with the few [illegible] one dollar's worth that his credit had been good for. Now Mike Brent was a bigger [illegible] than Mr. Sump cared to [illegible] where, and when he turned and frowned down on him Mr. Sump felt a qualm of fear.

"We're neighbors," he offered quickly.

"Who's we?" growled Mike Brent.

"You and me. I seed the house and I jest come in to see who's [illegible]."

"Afoot?" Mike Brent looked at the little man's shoes, [illegible] with [illegible] eye the tracks they left in the soft dirt of the new trail, and then stared at the shoes again.

"Well, yes. I got a [illegible] up there. If I can get you something in town—"

"Where you campin'?"

"Up near the town."

"Then how come we're neighbors?"

"[illegible] far with a car."

"Prob'ly not, prob'ly not." Mike Brent [illegible] on his revolver. "Then here's where I take a ride. There's things in your camp I'd like to see. I'll go along with you."

COMFORT GONE FROM CAMP

Mr. Sump drove the four miles to his camp with varying bursts of speed. He started out with his foot hard on the gas, and then suddenly shifted into low. Another change of mind gave him high mileage again, and a furtive glance at Mike Brent's face put him back at a crawl. Mike Brent looked around him with great interest. To him a ride in a car was always an experiment with wings.

The different speeds were no more disconcerting than the veers and checks, the rises and falls of a bird in flight. But what they actually gauged were the fluctuations of Mr. Sump's reasoning. His best bet, he had finally concluded, was to take the prospector straight to camp and give him back his blankets. Mrs. Sump could make the explanations. She had always been good that way.

Fortunately for the erratic driver they found Mrs. Sump at home. She was lying under the cedar tree on a couch fashioned of Mike Brent's mattress and two of his blankets, and was reading a magazine and munching late pears. Ellie, seated on the rest of the blankets, was playing cards with her sister. They, too, were munching late pears.

The whole scene was one of innocent happiness. Mike Brent, who had once spared a she-bear and her cubs because he liked the way they played together, blushed for the gun on his hip as he stepped out of the car. Mr. Sump did not see the blush. He saw the blankets in plain view, and he saw Mike Brent reach for his gun.

Prepared for the worst Mr. Sump covered his eyes and cowered down by the wheel. He held his breath and waited. But nothing happened; he breathed again and looked up. He then observed that the prospector was trying to [illegible] gun from these gentle females, not to draw it.

"I—I'm intrudin', ma'am," stammered Mike Brent. "But I come for my blankets."

Mrs. Sump sat up and brushed back her straying hair. "My lands, are them YOUR blankets, mister? We found them lyin' under this here tree, and figgered some [illegible] had found they was too heavy to carry, and so dumped 'em. But you're such a big strong man I guess their weight don't mean nothin' to YOU." She [illegible] up at him.

"I ain't carryin' them. He's driv-

HOT, TIRED AND DRY

[illegible]

Mr. Sump [illegible] "We ain't got [illegible]," he [illegible].

"We ain't," said Mike Brent. "There's [illegible]. You come into the hills to dig gold. View [illegible] there's where [illegible]. Look down. [illegible] There's where you work [illegible] There's where you dig [illegible] Get goin'."

[illegible] to fatten on. Don't miss. Get gun'."

Mr. Sump went, and he went [illegible] that Mike B[illegible]. The weight [illegible] pulled on [illegible] him. But with Mike Brent's glowering face right [illegible] and with Mike Brent's [illegible] within an inch of his [illegible] as best [illegible] whitening the soft palms of [illegible]. Where hanging to a [illegible] have eased and [illegible]. The rock cut [illegible], and he took it with [illegible].

DIED IN GOLD HUNT

A hot wind blew through the [illegible] with the sweat on hands and [illegible] caked like cement.

[illegible] to gasp and [illegible] smoke. Whenever he [illegible] Mike Brent he saw the [illegible] revolver first, and then [illegible] eyes behind it. He [illegible] on.

[illegible] approached the stream that [illegible]

[illegible] Brent let him drink the water and then picked out [illegible] likely place for [illegible] with pick and shovel [illegible] Mr. Sump boiled [illegible] and experienced all the sensations of being cooked. Mike Brent sat in the shade [illegible] and directed his operations.

"Now you [illegible] it out," he ordered. [illegible] wash your gravel. Shake it harder. Roll it around. Wait a minute. Look there. What do you see?"

Mr. Sump [illegible] and looked where Mike Brent pointed.

"Nothin'."

"Yes you do. You see blowflies."

crawled under a bush and died there.

"Some mix up over claims," mused Mike Brent. "They happen every now and then. The poor [illegible]. They come here thinkin' a claim is something to hang to. Prospectors of the depression. They're all goin' to get rich down here in the Diggings. The papers [illegible] another. And there's no man can tell them nothin'." He sighed heavily.

Mr. Sump, fearful of advancing [illegible] rooted to the stones, and waited. The hot silence was broken only by the drone of the blowflies.

"[illegible] the heat," muttered Mike Brent again. "Gold—Gold." His voice fell away to a whisper and he [illegible] Diggings until a choking cough [illegible].

"Get goin'," he ordered, returning to his old curtness. "We've had enough prospectin' for today."

MOVE AWAY FROM THERE

Mr. Sump reached his camp in a state close to collapse. It was already nightfall. The family were cleaning up a chicken stew. The coffee pot was still bubbling. These evidences of active foraging during the day brought forth no comment from Mr. Sump. He ate his [illegible] mechanically. He was too tired to know what he ate. It might have been wood-rat stew and he would not have cared.

He kicked up a pile of pine needles, and stretched himself out on them. Every muscle in his body ached, every bone was sore. He tried to sleep, but each time he closed his eyes he saw the two [illegible] and he shuddered into wakefulness again.

The night was long. Pale patches of moonlight stole through the [illegible]. Dry branches crackled. He could hear the gurgle of the stream below, and the movement of life around him, the rustle of [illegible] dry leaves, the flutter of a bat's wings, a splash in the water. But all through the night his ears strained for one [illegible] of the blowflies down in the Diggings.

The next morning, at daybreak, the Sump car piled high with Mike Brent's blankets, russet pears, [illegible] chickens, and [illegible].

"We're off," said Mr. Sump, slapping Mrs. Sump on the knee.

"We're off, kids," said Mrs. Sump to the three children in the back seat.

A lark's trill announced the rising sun. A light wind brought a few pine needles down like a benediction. Mr. Sump threw the car into gear and the Sumps moved on.

Old Timers To Rally Monday At Lake Picnic

Annual gala picnic of the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old Timers' Association will take place at Lakeview, South Cooking lake, Monday commencing at 3:00 o'clock with a full sports program.

Special features of this year's sports is a baseball game between the grandmothers and grandfathers of the association, as well as a relay between three generations. The North and South Side residents of the city will meet in a softball tournament.

Dancing in the Lakeview pavilion to the tunes of the Oldtimers' orchestra will wind up the fifth annual bang-up picnic.

The association urges that all attending come provided with complete picnic baskets, as only tea, coffee and hot water will be supplied on the picnic grounds. Supper in the form of a basket lunch, will be provided from five to seven o'clock in the evening.

Mumps Leading Disease Report Here This Week

Eighty-seven cases of communicable disease were reported to the [illegible] this week, as compared to 95 last week, according to figures released Saturday by Dr. G. M. Little, city medical health officer. Mumps led the list with 34 cases as against 52 last week.

Classification of other diseases follows, figures for this week and last week being given in that order: scarlet fever, 7, 7; measles, 22, 14; whooping cough, 5, 0; chickenpox, 17, 20; rubella, 0, 1; tuberculosis (pulmonary), 1, 1; erysipelas, 1, 0.

Edmonton Youth Is Accepted For R.A.F. Position

Word was received here Saturday that Derek Perkins, 19-year-old son of Major and Mrs. P. H. Perkins, 10024 147 street, has been accepted for a commission by the Royal Air Force. He will leave for England immediately and will sail from Montreal next Friday, it was announced.

Derek was educated at Eastwood public and high school, matriculating with honors in 1937 when he won the I.O.D.E. award for the highest standing in city high schools. He has never done any flying, but will receive all his instruction with the Air Force.

Parents To Pay For All Damage Done By Children

Damage to street lights and windows by youthful owners of air [illegible] must be made good by the parents, [illegible] Chief of Police A. G. Shute today.

Since the school closing on June 30 many reports of such damage have been received by the police and in all cases where the culprits are apprehended parents have been assessed the cost of the damage done and the slingshots or rifles have been impounded.

Little Orphan Annie
JACK NEVER WAS ONE TO USE HALF MEASURES--- ONCE HE DECIDED TO HELP ACE CHANCE, HE GAVE EVERYTHING AT HIS COMMAND---HIS DYNAMIC ENERGY, HIS EVERY THOUGHT, HIS TIME, THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR SPECIALISTS---HIS VERY BLOOD-
WELL, JACK, THANKS TO THE BLOOD YOU GAVE, "BINDLE AL" WILL LIVE- YOU'RE A BRAVE MAN, JACK-
POPPYCOCK! WHAT'S BLOOD? MINE WAS THE ONLY KIND THAT MATCHED- I'VE GOT PLENTY LEFT-
BUT WHY YOU'VE DONE ALL THIS FOR A MAN YOU NEVER SAW OR EVEN HEARD OF BEFORE IS MORE THAN I CAN FATHOM-
HA! HA! NICE PUZZLE THERE FOR YOU, DOC- I'LL GIVE YOU THE RIGHT ANSWER SOME TIME, MAYBE-GEE- YUH DID IT, JACK- YUH DID IT- YOU'VE EARNED PLENTY SLEEP- AREN'T YOU GOIN' TO TURN IN?
NO- I'M NOT DONE YET- THAT WAS ONLY THE FIRST ROUND- LOT TO BE DONE YET-
HI, CHIEF- JUST DROPPED IN TO SEE YOUR STAR BOARDER- I DON'T THINK YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE HIM HERE MUCH LONGER-
WE'VE HEARD- YOUR BLOOD TRANSFUSIONS SAVED "BINDLE AL'S" LIFE- WELL, YOU'RE THAT KIND OF GUY, JACK-
YOU SAVED TWO GUYS- "BINDLE AL" FROM GUN SHOT WOUNDS; ACE CHANCE FROM THE CHAIR FOR SHOOTING "BINDLE"- NEITHER OF 'EM WAS WORTH SAVING, IF YOU ASK ME-
I HAD REASONS- LET ME TALK TO ACE, WILL YOU?
YEAH? SO "BINDLE AL" WILL LIVE, EH? WHO CARES?
WHY, I THOUGHT YOU MIGHT, FOR ONE- THAT'S WHY I CAME TO TELL YOU-
WHY, IT MEANS YOU'LL BE FREE IN JUST A FEW DAYS, ACE- I'M GETTING YOU THE BEST LAWYER IN THE STATE- WE HAVE A DATE TO SEE THE PROSECUTOR----
WHY? WHY ARE YOU DOING ALL THIS? WHAT'S MY BUSINESS TO YOU? WHO INVITED YOU TO STICK YOUR NOSE INTO MY AFFAIRS?
HEY! WAIT A SECOND- WHY--- I--- --ER---THAT IS, I THOUGHT-
SURE- HERO STUFF! GAVE YOUR BLOOD! GOING TO PLUCK A BRAND FROM THE BURNING! EXPECTED ME TO FALL ON MY KNEES TO YOU AS MY DELIVERER!
7-10-38
NOT ME! I'LL GET ALONG- I'D RATHER ROT IN HERE THAN ACCEPT ANY OF YOUR FAVORS-
WHY, YOU-U-U! I'LL GET YOU OUT OF HERE NOW JUST FOR THE PLEASURE OF SMACKING YOUR EARS BACK-SEE? GOOD-BYE!
HA! HA! HA! THAT'S A NIFTY! I DID FEEL SORT OF PROUD OF MYSELF AND I DID EXPECT HIM TO BE A LITTLE GRATEFUL- OH, WELL- I'LL GO THROUGH WITH IT- GET HIM FREED---FOR ROSE-

OUT OUR WAY The Willets By Williams

I CAN'T STAND YOU GAZIN' IN MY EYES LIKE THAT, AN' LOOKIN', SO PATHETIC
THIS WON'T DO EITHER — I CAN HEAR YOU GULPIN'. IT MAKES ME FEEL STINGY — BUT GOSH, YOU NEVER SEEM TO GET FULL!
I GOT TO DO SUMP'N SO I CAN GET TO EAT WITHOUT HIM GAZIN' AT EVERY BITE I TAKE — LIKE I WAS A HOG!
I KNOW HOW I CAN SLOW HIM UP, ANYWAY —
THIS WILL MAKE YOU EAT MORE LIKE A HUMAN BEIN' AN' GIVE ME A CHANCE TO ENJOY MINE
A DOG'S TASTER MUST BE DOWN IN HIS STUMMICK, BECAUSE THE FOOD'S NEVER IN HIS MOUTH LONG ENOUGH TO TASTE IT!
WHAT DO YOU CALL THIS?
WHY, I'D CALL IT A EQUALIZER
A BITE OF CHEESE WRAPPED IN A NEWSPAPER SLOWS HIM DOWN TO MY SPEED

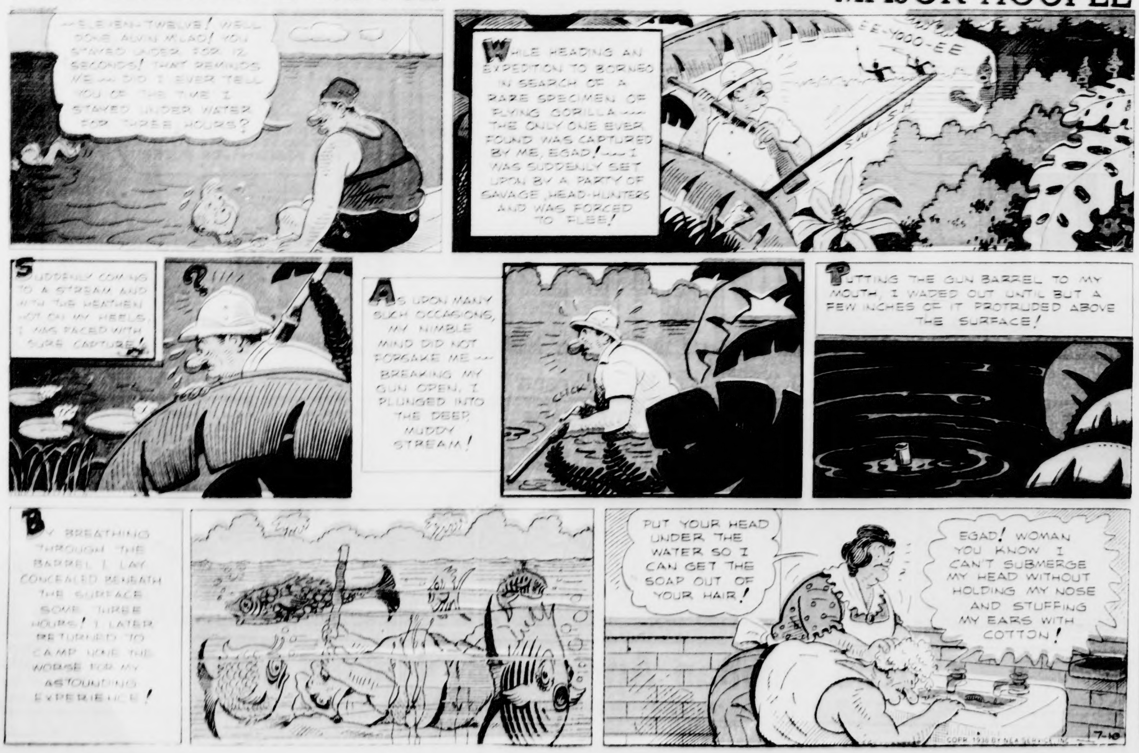
OUR BOARDING HOUSE MAJOR HOOPLE



— ELEVEN — TWELVE! WELL DONE, ALVIN M'LAD! YOU STAYED UNDER FOR 12 SECONDS! THAT REMINDS ME — DID I EVER TELL YOU OF THE TIME I STAYED UNDER WATER FOR THREE HOURS?
WHILE HEADING AN EXPEDITION TO BORNEO IN SEARCH OF A RARE SPECIMEN OF FLYING GORILLA — THE ONLY ONE EVER FOUND WAS CAPTURED BY ME, EGAD! — I WAS SUDDENLY SET UPON BY A PARTY OF SAVAGE HEAD-HUNTERS AND WAS FORCED TO FLEE!
EE-YOOO-EE
SUDDENLY COMING TO A STREAM AND WITH THE HEATHEN HOT ON MY HEELS, I WAS FACED WITH SURE CAPTURE!
AS UPON MANY SUCH OCCASIONS, MY NIMBLE MIND DID NOT FORSAKE ME — BREAKING MY GUN OPEN, I PLUNGED INTO THE DEEP, MUDDY STREAM!
CLICK
PUTTING THE GUN BARREL TO MY MOUTH, I WADED OUT UNTIL BUT A FEW INCHES OF IT PROTRUDED ABOVE THE SURFACE!
BY BREATHING THROUGH THE BARREL I LAY CONCEALED BENEATH THE SURFACE SOME THREE HOURS! I LATER RETURNED TO CAMP NONE THE WORSE FOR MY ASTOUNDING EXPERIENCE!
PUT YOUR HEAD UNDER THE WATER SO I CAN GET THE SOAP OUT OF YOUR HAIR!
EGAD! WOMAN YOU KNOW I CAN'T SUBMERGE MY HEAD WITHOUT HOLDING MY NOSE AND STUFFING MY EARS WITH COTTON!

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
by William Ferguson
SOUND
CONSISTS OF RHYTHMICAL PULSATIONS OF THE AIR, STIMULATING THE AUDITORY NERVOUS CENTERS OF LIVING ANIMALS!
IT IS POSSIBLE TO JUDGE THE DISTANCE OF LIGHTNING BY MULTIPLYING THE NUMBER OF SECONDS BETWEEN THE FLASH AND THE THUNDER THAT FOLLOWS, BY 1120, SINCE SOUND TRAVELS THROUGH THAT NUMBER OF FEET OF AIR PER SECOND.
COPR. 1938 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.
MANY MILLIONS OF YEARS AGO, BEFORE LIFE APPEARED ON OUR PLANET, TREES FELL SILENTLY TO EARTH, AND OCEAN WAVES BEAT NOISELESSLY AGAINST LONELY SHORES... FOR THERE WAS NO EAR ON EARTH TO CATCH THE AIR VIBRATIONS.
THE LOUDEST SOUND THE WORLD HAS EVER HEARD IS BELIEVED TO HAVE OCCURRED IN 1883, WHEN THE VOLCANO, KRAKATOA, EXPLODED! THE NOISE TRAVELED AROUND THE GLOBE THREE TIMES.
THROUGH WATER, SOUND TRAVELS FOUR TIMES AS FAST AS THROUGH AIR, AND FIFTEEN TIMES AS FAST THROUGH IRON.
THE HUMAN EAR CAN, IN SOME CASES, HEAR SOUNDS OF 40,000 VIBRATIONS PER SECOND! DOGS CAN HEAR MORE HIGHLY PITCHED SOUNDS! IN FACT, YOU CAN CALL A DOG WITH A WHISTLE THAT HUMANS CANNOT HEAR.

[illegible]ITH HIS MUTINOUS CREW PICKED UP BY A MYSTERIOUS MOTOR-CRUISER, DANNY AND THE BOYS SET ABOUT THEIR TASK......
I DON'T KNOW WHETHER THAT CREW WILL GIVE US ANY TROUBLE, BUT WE'VE GOT TO WORK FAST, IN CASE THEY DO!
IF THERE'S A SUNKEN TREASURE DOWN THERE, WE'VE GOT TO GET IT IN A HURRY AND SCRAM OUT OF HERE!
LET ME GO DOWN FIRST, DANNY!
THIS IS A MAN'S JOB, OLD BOY! I DON'T KNOW WHAT'S DOWN THERE!
WELL, IF I GO DOWN FIRST, I CAN TELL YOU!
YOU HOLD THIS ROPE...IF I JERK IT THREE TIMES, PULL ME UP....IN A HURRY!
GOT PLENTY OF OXYGEN IN THAT TANK, DANNY?
HE'S GOT ENOUGH FOR FOUR HOURS!
BOY, I HOPE WE HIT THAT TREASURE RIGHT OFF THE BAT! DANNY'S GOT PLENTY OF MONEY TIED UP IN THIS VENTURE!
THREE JERKS! HE WANTS TO COME UP! LOOK DOWN AND SEE WHAT'S WRONG! HE'S ONLY DOWN ABOUT THIRTY FEET!!
I CAN'T SEE A THING....THE WATER IS ALL MUDDY!
BETTER GIVE ME A HAND WITH THIS ROPE! I CAN HARDLY BUDGE IT!
GEE, IT DOES PULL HARD! FROM THE LOOKS OF THAT WATER, HE'S STIRRED UP MUD. MAYBE HE'S STUCK!
I BETTER LOOK!
MUD NOTHING! THAT'S THE STUFF AN OCTOPUS SHOOTS OUT WHEN HE'S MAD!!

DICK TRACY
by Chester Gould
AS I SAID BEFORE, MY NAME IS SPOTTS, BRIGHTON SPOTTS. MY HOME IS IN LAYTON VALLEY JUNCTION AND-GET THIS, GENTLEMEN, I WAS NOT CHASED OUT OF TOWN!
AND YOU DIDN'T ESCAPE FROM ANY KEEPERS OR ANYTHING LIKE THAT?
OH, NO-OH, NO, NO, NO! I LEFT HOME OF MY OWN ACCORD IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT-AND JOURNEYED HERE BY TRAIN TO TALK WITH YOU ON VERY URGENT BUSINESS.
LISTEN, SONNY, JUST WHAT'S ON YOUR MIND? THIS IS A POLICE STATION, YOU KNOW-AND WE'RE VERY BUSY.
UP TO THIS TIME, I HAVE HELD BACK A VERY IMPORTANT FACT, MR. TRACY. I, TOO, AM A SLEUTH!
YOU DON'T MEAN TO TELL ME. PUT 'ER THERE.
HOW'S BUSINESS IN LAYTON VALLEY JUNCTION? YOU LOOK ALL RUN DOWN. BETTER GET AWAY FOR A REST, OLD MAN, BEFORE YOU CRACK UP.
AHA! BRIGHTON SPOTTS NEVER RESTS. THE LAW KNOWS NO SLEEP.
I THINK YOU'VE GOT SOMETHING THERE, TOOTS. WELL, SO LONG! IT'S BEEN NICE NOT KNOWING YOU.
I AM A GRADUATE OF THE ACME DETECTIVE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL. -AND AM NOW ON LESSON SEVEN OF MY MASTER'S DEGREE. I CARRY HANDCUFFS.
LISTEN, SON, RUN ALONG NOW. YOU'RE A SPLENDID YOUNG MAN AND LAYTON VALLEY JUNCTION NEEDS YOU. YOU CAN GET A TRAIN BACK HOME AT 5:22.
GENTLEMEN, LET ME ASK YOU ONE QUESTION: HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE B&H RAILROAD?
CERTAINLY, BRIGHTON, HAVE YOU?
THEN TAKE A LOOK AT THAT!
GREAT CAESAR! A SEVERED FOREFINGER.
INDEED! THE FOREFINGER OF A THIEF WHO HELPED ROB TWO FREIGHT CARS ON A B&H SIDING IN LAYTON VALLEY JUNCTION LAST MAY.
I-AM WORKING ON THAT CASE.
